Little Money, Big Result.
Can You See 4 Dimensions?
Educating Amanullah.
The Young Witch Killer.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

WITH a little money you can do much these days. For instance, with only $260,000,000 a group in Wall Street, with J. P. Morgan's Company at the head, is planning a merger of corporations totalling two billions of dollars. One share in ten plus brains will control almost anything.

Even the Rockefeller family, according to official statement, has less than 15 per cent of the various Standard Oil companies.

The latest two-billion-dollar combination has to do with power, gas and public service corporations.

THE time has gone by for crying your eyes out over big combinations.

If they promote efficiency and give the public a share of the savings, they are good for the public.

If not, console yourself with the thought that if the public is not intelligent enough to watch and control one big combination, it surely wouldn't have the intelligence to watch a dozen little combinations.

EINSTEIN, considered by some the greatest mind in abstract mathematics since Newton, delivers to the Prussian Academy of Science a manuscript of five pages, dealing with the inter-relations between mechanics and electro-dynamics.

This new contribution to science is expected to revolutionize man's conception of the universe.

EINSTEIN devoted 10 years to writing the five pages, which present the universe as existing in four dimensions, instead of only three, length, breadth and thickness or depth. Science assures you that there is a fourth.

WE CAN'T feel or imagine that fourth dimension. The great French mathematician, Poincare, said that after ten years of incessant study a man MIGHT have a faint conception of it.

And of all men living, only one, a British mathematician, Hutton, is actually able to think in the realm of four dimensions.

FORTUNATELY for us, three dimensional creatures, three dimensions are PLENTY.

And, perhaps, the four-dimension idea will go some day to join the once fully accepted "nebular hypothesis."

WE KNOW now that what science once called "nebulae," imaginary stuff out of which planets were made, are separate universes, each with its hundreds of millons of suns.

KING AMANULLAH, of Afghanistan, discovered suddenly and violently what American prohibition enthusiasts are discovering slowly, that it isn't easy to change men's habits by proclamation or law.

AMANULLAH came back from his visit to England wearing European clothes, his wife fashionably dressed, short skirts, silk stockings, nothing to cover up her face.

He announced that women in Afghanistan were also to go with their faces uncovered, no more "seclusion."

Tribes rose against him, armed, drove him into a fortress.

KING AMANULLAH changed his mind. Afghan girls sent to be educated in the modern way in Turkey are to come home. European dress is to be abolished. Soldiers of Afghanistan are to be allowed to follow and bow down to their religious leaders, the "Holymen," or Pirs, and women will be kept in seclusion.

All the suggested reforms will be thrown overboard. Wise Amanullah, he wanted peace.

THE state of Pennsylvania demands that a jury pass sentence on a boy of 14, convicted of killing a witch or "Hex." The jury is told not to consider age, but the seriousness of the crime. The boy confessed and said he was helping to kill a witch because he thought he would see some interesting magic.

ALSO if they could get three hairs from the witch's head and bury them eight feet under ground, the witch's spell would be taken off them.

To have sent that boy to the electric chair, instead of somewhere to be properly fed and educated, would be worthy of the primitive witchcraft days.

THE great Krupp gun factory thought it was ruined when the Allies wouldn't let it make any more cannon. It shows now profits of $10,000,000 a year. That and a drop in the Reichsbank rate, seem to confirm Mr. Gilbert's statement as to German prosperity and ability to pay.

"AMERICAN bankers," a rather loose term, are supposed to have decided not to buy the German bonds, thus supplying cash for the Allies. The sum would run to billions and there is no demand for so many German bonds here.

There ought not to be, considering the opportunities in American investments.

THE Chinese, poor creatures, butchered, starved, forced into revolutions of which they do not know the meaning, know at least one thing, and that is, that it is important to have good roads.

Mr. G. Walter Reed, of the Santa Fe Railroad, quotes an engineer just back from China: "Food from South China cannot reach those starving in Northern China because of fiftteen hundred impassable miles."

U. S. JURY ACTS IN RUM CASES

ART DESIGN OF STATUE REVISED

(Copyright, 1929, by Sun-Telegraph.)

The magnificent memorial to George Westinghouse in Schenley Park will be completed during the summer, after several years of study and labor.

But on either side of the focal point—the figure of the late Pittsburgh industrialist — where there originally were to have been two buxom young women garbed only in gaily waving veils, there will actually be two fully dressed male figures.

The change in plans, kept secret for many months, was revealed today after inquries about the delay in the construction of the memorial. Differences of opinion as to the various values of art and nudity, following the original sketches made in 1926, grew among the members of the committee. They were finally settled, with the more conservative members ruling out the daintily clad maidens, in behalf of the more severe figures, one a businessman and the other a laborer.

It's the old story of whether art can best illustrate the genius of enterprise and the genius of engineering by "maidens beneath the boughs," or by modern gentlemen outfitted in a business suit.

TO COST $200,000

The central theme of the memorial, which will cost in the neighborhood of $200,000, is this medallion of the late industrialist, with the two figures on either side.

There will be a third figure in the forepart, half a dozen feet from the medal. This will be a handsome youth looking with admiration at the figure of Westinghouse, as though getting his inspiration from the spirit of the great industrial leader. Art here, too, has its limitations. The symbol of youth in this instance is also warmly clad, although, being a modernist, he wears no hat.

Daniel Chester French, veteran New York sculptor, has completed his models and the work of casting is going on. The medallion and figures are to be in bronze.

The architectural features, which promise to be exceptionally imposing and beautiful, are nearing completion through the office of Hornbostel & Woods, local architects.

DESIGN IMPRESSIVE

The design of the monument, half-moon shape, includes the 41-foot back wall, of bronze, with the medal and two figures centered. To the front on a marble floorway, stands the youth, his pedestal but slightly elevated. A small stream idles beneath the marble floor and forms a small lake or lily pond. The spot is at the junction of two park roads, on the left drive towards the golf course. To the extreme left are the Carnegie Tech schools, with the school of design, where sculpture is taught, almost casting its shadow on the monument.

The spot, beautifully located, is shadowed by large trees and forms an ideal background for the memorial.

Members of the committee are representative of Westinghouse, the Chamber of Commerce and the city government.

"HEX" KILLER GOES ON STAND

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN,
International News Service.

COURTHOUSE, YORK, Pa., Jan. 12.—His pale face twisting nervously, Wilbert Hess, 18, took the witness stand today and related his part in the slaying of Nelson D. Rehmeyer, a 60-year-old farmer, whom he believed to be a "witch."

FAMILY "BELIEVERS"

The defense of Hess opened this morning with Attorney Harvey A. Gross addressing the jury. He told the jurors that Wilbert Hess, as well as his father and mother, believed in "such fanatical and ridiculous things as witches." He said Wilbert was influenced by John Blymyer, the convicted "powwow" doctor, who got him and John Curry to go to Rehmeyer's home to obtain a lock of the old man's hair.

"Blymyer was the master mind in this killing," declared Gross.

MOTHER IN TEARS

The defendant's mother, Mrs. Alice Hess, sobbed softly as her son shuffled to the stand. His father, Milton J. Hess, an anemic-looking man wearing pectacles, sat beside her at the defense counsel's table.

In a quiet voice Hess gave his age as 18. He was asked by De-

8TH DEAD IN PLANE WRECK

International News Service.

MIDDLETOWN, Pa., Jan. 12.—The death toll in the tragic crash of the Army transport plane C-2, near here yesterday, mounted to eight today when Sergt. Patrick Conroy, of Somerville, Mass., the lone soldier who had survived the disaster, died at Polyclinic Hospital in Harrisburg.

Five of the other seven men in the plane were killed outright, and two died in Harrisburg hospitals shortly after the crash.

Two investigations into the disaster are under way.

ROLLED THREE TIMES

The bodies of all eight men in the plane were crushed when the big ship rolled over three times in a yard near the postoffice at Royalton, a few miles from here, after a wing caught in a tree.

The three motors of the huge Fokker machine, a sister ship of the famous "Question Mark," apparently had gone dead and the pilot could not find a large open field in which to make a safe landing.

The plane had just left the Army air depot here on a return flight to its base at Bolling Field, Washington.

Church Burns

DR. J. FRANK NORRIS

GUN-PASTOR'S 2ND CHURCH BURNS

FORT WORTH, Tex., Jan. 12.—(AP.)—Fire broke out in the First Baptist Church here this morning, and the church and auditorium fell in flames.

The Sunday school building, claimed to have the largest Sunday school class in the world, also was destroyed.

The church, one of the city's landmarks, was in the heart of the business district. Dr. J. Frank Norris, noted fundamentalist, is the pastor.

Dr. Norris was charged a number of years ago with burning a church of which he was pastor, but was acquitted after a long and stormy trial, one of the most sensational in the history of the state. He maintained that his enemies burned that church and laid the blame on him.

Dr. Norris has been the storm center of the Baptist church in Texas for years. He came prominently into view two years ago when he shot and killed D. E. Chipps, wealthy lumberman, in the study of the church. He was indicted and tried for murder, but was acquitted on his plea of self-defense.

The pastor has repeatedly charged from the pulpit that threats have been made against his life and the church establishment. Recently he has been unusually vigorous in campaigning against alleged vice conditions here.

NORTH SIDE RE-TRIALS LOOM

The federal grand jury was votinng today on whom it should indict in its second investigation of the alleged North Side rum ring.

Before the jurors adjourned they were expected to reveal the identity of any North Siders who may be named in the true bills.

HIT AT NORTH SIDERS

That the investigation was directed against many of the defendants in the former North Side rum conspiracy case was indicated by the large number of witnesses from that side of the river appearing before the grand jury since it convened Monday.

Many of the witnesses were those who appeared before the grand jury investigation last June, which resulted in the indictment of 73 persons, and subsequently as government witnesses at the trial in November.

NUMBER UNKNOWN

District attorneys representing the government in the investigation gave no indication as to the number against whom they are seeking indictments. The general opinion was that it would be fewer than in the previous North Side indictment. The latter indictment contained the names of many prominent North Side politicians and police officers, who, together with alleged dealers in contraband liquors, were charged with conspiring to violate the prohibition law.

After the case had gone to trial Judge R. M. Gibson directed a verdict of acquittal, holding that the government had failed to establish that the defendants had conspired "together," as charged in the indictment.

News Dealers for Sun-Telegraph Exclusively

A large group of news dealers met in the Seventh Avenue Hotel Thursday night and voted to discontinue handling the Pittsburgh Press. John R. Noble, president of the body, said the Press had demanded that the dealers establish the so-called "junior system," under which they would be required to employ boys who would deliver no other paper but the Press. This plan, Noble said, was not acceptable.

Members of the group sent a circular letter to their customers today in which they said:

"We take this opportunity to advise you that from this date we will no longer represent the Pittsburgh Press; therefore, the same will not be delivered to your home by us.

"Our action in discontinuing our service with the Pittsburgh Press was due to certain demands made by the Pittsburgh Press in methods they desire us to put in operation. We cannot, in justice to all newspapers that we represent, continue to represent the Press.

"Therefore, in the evening and Sunday we will only represent the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and in the morning the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette."

The territory affected by the decision was said to include Allegheny, Beaver, Washington, Westmoreland and Fayette counties and part of Armstrong county.

County Probes Pool Rooms

Chief of County Detectives George T. Murren today launched a county-wide probe of all poolrooms with especial reference to the practice of allowing minors to play. Murren started his campaign after the arrest of F. R. Monger, 35, Island avenue, McKees Rocks, was brought to his attention.

Monger was arrested last night by Constable Hyman Cohen, and after being questioned today by County Detective Lawrence Kline, a charge of being a "common gambler" was made against him before Alderman T. D. Jones. The arrest was made on complaint of Mrs. Mary Surma, 818 O'Donovan street, McKees Rocks, who alleged that her son, Joseph, 19, had lost $115 to Monger playing pool.

Trio Held Under $300,000 Bail

DETROIT, Jan. 12.—(INS.)—Mrs. Grace M. Wood and her two alleged accomplices, Taylor Pierce and William Thompson, were held under $50,000 bond each for examination January 21 when they were arraigned in Justice Court today on a warrant charging them with assault with intent to kill and murder Mrs. Wood's husband, Ralph.

Fixing of the bond in two sureties sets the bond required for each prisoner at $100,000.

MERCURY AT 15; WARMER DUE TONIGHT

The peak of a fast-moving cold snap hit this district today, tumbling the mercury to 15 degrees above.

The sun shining from an almost cloudless sky kept the temperature from going much lower, Forecaster W. S. Brotzman said. Tonight, he predicted, the mercury will range from 15 to 20 degrees. A rapid rise in the thermometer is in prospect for Sunday, he said, when the frigid spell will have spent itself.

A biting northwest wind which reached a velocity of 32 miles an hour last night had veered to the southwest this morning and died down to 15 miles.

From 21 last midnight, the mercury fell to 15 at 10 a. m. when the sun's rays checked the drop.

15 Injured in Crash Of Cars in Chicago

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—(AP.)—Two street cars collided at a triple junction of Clark and Center streets and Lincoln Park, West, late last night, 15 passengers being injured. The rear wheels of a northbound Clark street car left the tracks, the rear of the car swinging around into the path of a southbound car. Both cars were crowded. Many of the injured suffered fractured arms and legs and severe bruises, but none was critically hurt.

Mellon Lays Wreath On Hamilton's Grave

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—(AP.)—The one hundred and seventy-second anniversary of the birth of Alexander Hamilton, first secretary of the treasury, was commemorated yesterday with ceremonies at his statue in Washington on which Secretary Mellon, the present treasury head, laid a wreath. Representative James M. Beck, of Pennsylvania, headed a delegation of the Sons of the American Revolution, which had charge of the exercises.

FATHER PAROLED TO GIRL; FORCED TO TAKE PLEDGE

Catherine Schmidt, 16, of 117 Madison avenue, North Side, was made the custodian of her father, Clark Schmidt, 36, this morning by Magistrate A. D. Brandon, Morals Court. Schmidt was arrested last night on a disorderly conduct charge. Brandon had Schmidt take a pledge not to drink for a year and paroled him in the custody of Catherine, with the threat that violation of the pledge would net the father 90 days.

Catherine gave Brandon an insight into alleged conditions in her neighborhood. Instead of cigarets being sold two packages for 25 cents, she said, the rule now was a bargain offer of one package for 15 cents and a drink of moonshine for 10 cents.

A pint of moonshine could be purchased with a loaf of bread, she said, or the butcher would wrap up a pint with a pound of hot dogs. Small storekeepers, she said, carried moonshine charges on their books. Her father confirmed her charges.

The girl also charged that the sellers were protected by a powerful politician named "Archie."

COMPROMISE LOOMS FOR HOUSE APPROPRIATIONS HEAD

HARRISBURG LEADERS PARLEY

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 12.—(AP.)—C. Jay Goodnough, of Cameron county, and Robert J. Spangler, of York, were mentioned today as possible compromise choices of the Republican leaders for chairman of the House Appropriations Committee.

Both were regarded as supporters of Joseph R. Grundy, Bucks county leader and close friend of Gov. Fisher.

The party leaders, who had been in conference here for two days in an effort to complete the organization of the state Legislature, adjourned today after they had failed to settle the dispute in the Allegheny county delegation over the House appropriations chairmanship.

ALLEGHENY LOSES

Neither Representative William F. Stadtlander, of Pittsburgh, who was credited with the support of W. L. Mellon, nor John A. Rhodes, McKeesport, backed by State Senator Max G. Leslie for the post, are likely to be named, it was stated. After the conference adjourned without any decision on that and several other important House Committee places, Mr. Mellon returned to Pittsburgh.

Efforts will be made over the week end in Pittsburgh and Harrisburg to complete the chairmanship lists.

On the Senate side, most of the committees have been selected and the chairman named, but Senator Horace W. Schantz, president pro tempore, said their names would not be announced until the Legislature convenes Monday night.

PRESENT BILLS TUESDAY

Senator Schantz and Aaron B. Hess, speaker of the House, held a conference and tentatively agreed on next Tuesday as the first day for presenting bills. A resolution to that effect will be offered Monday night.

The slate committee of both branches of the general assembly took up the list of appointments for the session. These include about 200 clerical and other positions. Senator John G. Homsher, Lancaster county, is chairman of the Senate Committee, while Rhodes heads the House group. Members of both branches trooped into the Republican state committee headquarters throughout the day filing requests for jobs for constituents.

State Senator Frank Harris, of Pittsburgh, conferred with Thomas Raeburn White, of this city, on the enabling legislation for voting machines.

ing to spectators, the plane started to quiver when less than 200 feet in the air and plunged to the earth.

The occupants were Lieut. Henry R. Angell, of Birmingham, Ala., and seven enlisted men who were making the trip to gain air experience.

They were Private Samuel P. Jones, of Bellbuckle, Tenn.; Private Clarence Birch, of 2813 West Adams street, Chicago; Staff Sergeant R. J. Lehutta, Washington, D. C.; Staff Sergeant Henry Cronan, of Takoma Park, Md.; Master Sergeant Joseph McCarthy, of Washington, D. C.; Private Michael Kelly, of Minersville, Pa., and Conroy.

COMPLETE WRECK

The plane was so completely demolished that the cause of the disaster may never be known, according to officials at the airport here. A rigid investigation will be made by the official board of inquiry, which will report direct to the chief of the Air Corps at Washington.

A board of investigation appointed by Capt. F. F. Christine, acting commanding officer at the Middletown airport, was endeavoring to determine the cause of the accident this morning.

Dr. G. E. Brestle, deputy coroner of Dauphin county, also is making an investigation.

Capt. Henry A. Dinger, who had flown the plane here safely from Washington yesterday morning with nine passengers, returned here from Washington immediately after learning of the tragedy. He had flown back to Bolling Field a few minutes before the Fokker crashed.

Spectators who rushed to the scene said Lieut. Angell, in agony from his injuries, begged rescuers to kill him and end his pain.

"For God's sake, shoot me," he cried as the rescue workers, equipped with hacksaws and axes, struggled to extricate him from the tangled wreckage. The pilot suffered fractures of both legs, a broken arm, and internal injuries.

The bodies of Lieut. Angell and Private Kelly were brought here from Harrisburg, where the injured fliers died, and were placed beside those of their companions in an undertaking establishment. The rescue workers found the bodies of Jones, Birch, LeHutta, Cronan and McCarthy huddled in the twisted cabin, jammed in so tight that they were extricated with the greatest difficulty. Framework of the cabin had to be sawed away.

Nearly every strut in the plane was broken. The crash could be heard for blocks.

Officials at the airport here declared the plane had been inspected thoroughly and found to be in good condition just before it began its ill-fated trip.

SCHOOL LIQUOR PARTY LEADS TO SHOOTING

CAMDEN, Ark., Jan. 12.—(AP.)—The wrath of the father of a 15-year-old girl to whom liquor is alleged to have been served, along with about 75 other pupils at a party held by Camden high school pupils at a roadhouse near here last fall, culminated yesterday in a shooting affray in which the proprietor of the roadhouse was wounded critically.

Alex Hardin, 25, the proprietor, today lies at a hospital in a serious condition with four bullet wounds in his body and F. E. Sullivan, the girl's father, is in jail charged with the shooting.

The shooting occurred when Sullivan met Hardin in an alley. Sullivan, according to witnesses, shouted "You can't ruin my daughter," and opened fire with an automatic pistol. Immediately after the shooting Sullivan surrendered to police.

Weather Conditions.

Unusually rapid changes in weather occurred everywhere east of the Rocky Mountains. East of the Mississippi River there was a marked fall in temperature, while over the Plains states there was a rapid rise. The center of the high pressure area that caused the drop in temperature over this section is over the Western Gulf coast and a ridge extends northeastward over the lower Mississippi Valley and the Ohio Valley states. Over the northern and central plains the pressure is relatively low, a trough formation extending southwestward from a center of disturbance north of the lakes. High pressure continues over the Plateau section.

River Conditions.

There was a slight rise in the Monongahela and the Ohio rivers, and a fall in the upper Allegheny. The Allegheny is jammed with ice at several places in the upper river, and the pools are frozen over. A gorge has formed in the Youghiogheny a short distance below West Newton. Stage at Pittsburgh is 13.2 feet, stationary. Dam No. 2, 7.8, and Dam No. 6, 9.8. The dams are up.

Q.—What was Blymyer at your house for?

A.—Pow-wowing. He had a book with him.

Hess testified that when he was arrested he admitted he had hit Rehmeyer "once or twice." He was then shown a confession which he had signed and Attorney Gross quizzed him regarding it.

"ALL BEWITCHED"

Hess said Blymyer told him and his parents they "were all bewitched by Rehmeyer."

"Blymyer came to our house," said Hess, "and read a few lines from the bible. He said he would have to get a lock of Rehmeyer's hair. He said he would need someone to hold down the man, someone with nerve. I said I thought I could hold my nerve. My mother said it would be all right to go for the lock of hair to break the spell."

PARENTS ARE "SPOOKY"

The boy's dour, matronly looking mother is a spook believer. She told this writer so. Somebody has "put a spell on her." Else why should she be having all this trouble?

His father is superstitious, too. The Hesses always have been. They were only too willing to believe the story of John Blymyer, convicted pow-wow doctor, that they were "hexed" by Rehmeyer.

And Wilbert, tutored in witchcraft since babyhood, and perhaps pow-wowed through the various illnesses of childhood, quite willingly went with Blymyer and Curry, both of whom were this week sentenced to life imprisonment for their part in the brutal bludgeoning to death of Rehmeyer.

HIT BY REMORSE

After the bloody crime had been committed, it was learned by International News Service today, Wilbert was overcome with remorse. A student of the Bible, he could find nothing in the good book that would give him consolation for the deed he had helped commit.

"Oh, oh, why did I do it? Why did I do it?" he moaned when he reached home.

He was asked before court opened this morning how he felt. In a dead-tired voice, he replied:

"All right."

THURSTON SEES MAGIC WORK AT DINNER

Howard Thurston learned a lot about magic, the art he pursues, early Saturday morning in the William Penn Hotel.

A group of Pittsburghers invited him to dinner, which started at midnight. A minister, the Rev. T. V. Vorhees, pastor of the Venetia Methodist Episcopal Church, Venetia, met him at the door and found a rabbit in his coat. When he sat down to eat, there on a covered platter was a live goose.

It seems that the organization was also made up of magicians—the Pittsburgh Association of Magicians, Assembly 18.

Tricks of many sorts, with half a dozen of the members and visiting artists assisting, following the dinner and several brief talks, amused Thurston. After he explained in an address that he has been so busy working at his craft he never has seen a football game since he left school; never heard an opera, attended but one baseball game and rarely saw a show or read a book other than one about his work, Thurston was made the audience.

The show of magic was performed for his benefit.

Brief addresses were made by President McCaffrey, George Seibel, dramatic critic of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, who was toastmaster, C. E. Leety, of Youngstown, O., a newspaperman, John H. Hillard, publicity representative and Mr. Thurston.

Among the magicians performing were McCaffrey, D. W. Carter, the Rev. Vorhees and many others.

When the Baltimore apparatus arrived, however, Washington firemen had the blaze under control.

HOLDS UP 2 CABS, ONE TWICE

A well-dressed young man parked his sport car in Allegheny avenue early today and walked to the nearby taxicab stand. When Taxicab Driver H. B. Caskey stepped from his seat and opened the cab door for the prospective fare, he found a revolver against his ribs. He gave up $10 and the robber ran to his own auto and sped away.

Ten minutes later the same Beau Brummel approached John C. Haggerty, who was repairing a flat tire on his cab at West Montgomery avenue and Arch street. Haggerty, too, gave up $10.

Two hours later the natty dresser returned to the Allegheny avenue cab stand, apparently seeking a third victim. Haggerty, his tire repaired but his pocketbook flat, was there!

Haggerty didn't wait to see that revolver again. He stepped on the gas and sped for the North Side Police Station. When, with police, he returned, the modish marauder had fled.

STORE SALES EXECUTIVES TRAINING SCHOOL AT PITT

In this age of modern retail store merchandising methods, prospective sales people must get a thorough knowledge of sales methods and the merchandise they sell before they are given permanent employment.

That they get this knowledge and training is the task today of no less educated persons than a college graduate who has done a year's graduate work and holds a master of arts degree. Owners of 27 department stores in various parts of the country, cognizant of the need for highly trained personnel managers and training directors, some time ago provided an endowment of $600,000 for the establishment of the Retail Research Bureau at the University of Pittsburgh, where young women are given a year's training for such positions. The idea for the bureau was conceived by Pittsburgh department store owners according to James H. Greene, its director.

Each year 15 women college graduates are selected by the bureau from scores of applicants for the course. They receive scholarships to defray the expenses of their school work.

Theoretical instruction in store personnel work and retail merchandising methods is given them by a staff of nine instructors. One day a week these young women take up practical work in the various department stores of the city. They are given an opportunity to interview applicants for employment, to instruct sales people in making out cash and charge slips, to act as floor managers and to familiarize themselves with sales methods and merchandise of all kinds. They work in all departments, make observations, assist in making sales and do everything that will equip them to become competent store and personnel executives.

The staff of the bureau is also engaged in extensive store personnel and training research work. A multiple of problems is placed before them for solution by store owners and executives. Staff members not only endeavor to solve problems theoretically, but frequently visit stores, where they assist executives in solving them in a practical way.

LABOR FEDERATION RAPS STATE WELFARE WORKERS

HARRISBURG, Pa., Jan. 12.—(AP.)—The Pennsylvania Federation of Labor, in a resolution passed during its final conference here, advocated the repeal of the law creating the state department of welfare. The resolution characterized the department as an experiment which has failed and which has become "a fifth wheel on the vehicle of our state government."

This action marked the climax of a session in which the administration of the welfare department was severely criticised. Much of the criticism was evoked by the alleged differences between the department officials and the trustees of the state-owned hospitals in the coal regions of the state.

The resolution attacking the usefulness of the welfare department said:

"The department, when created, was an experiment in the idea of taking part of the duties of other departments and centralizing this power under the welfare department. In addition, thereto, other powers were granted, and a great many more assumed with the result that, in our opinion, we now have, instead of a welfare department, a department that concerns itself with anything and everything except welfare, and has become a department of bureaucrats, intoxicated with power and importance."

The legislative conference of the labor federation was followed by a meeting of the executive council at which plans were made for the drafting of bills embodying the various provisions discussed during the conference. These include the following:

Modification of the workmen's compensation act.

Elimination of the authority of sheriffs to issue proclamations in labor disputes and curbing the authority of deputy sheriffs.

HOOVER FAVORS U. S. ENTRY IN WORLD COURT

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—President-elect Herbert Hoover has passed the word to authoritative diplomatic circles that he is favorably disposed toward a new effort to bring about American adherence to the World Court.

This was the assurance carried back to New York today by Elihu Root, former Secretary of State, following his breakfast conference yesterday with Hoover.

Root has been invited by the council of the League of Nations to participate in the work of revising the original World Court protocol of 1920, together with all subsequent international law promulgated by the court's decisions.

DISCUSS POLICY

Root's conference with Hoover, it was learned, was devoted principally to a discussion of Hoover's wishes as to American policy.

Root was one of the commission of jurists which drew up the original protocol for the World Court. He has since been one of the nation's most vigorous advocates of American participation.

Winding up his first week in Washington Hoover grappled with farm relief problems today in his hotel headquarters.

First on the day's calling list was Senator McNary, of Oregon, co-author of the McNary-Haugen bill.

MELLON FOES BUSY

Rumblings of the Senate insurgents over the news that Hoover virtually has decided upon the reappointment of Andrew W. Mellon as secretary of the Treasury reverberated today as Senator Couzens, Michigan, one of the Senate's most conspicuous anti-Mellonites, paid his first call upon the President-elect.

The blunt statement of Senator Nye, of North Dakota, yesterday that he would oppose the re-appointment of Mellon marked the beginning of the first encounter between Hoover and the Senate.

LOUISIANA PAIR AGAIN WINS REPRIEVE

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 12.—(AP.)—The noose, which today was to claim the lives of Mrs. Ada Bonner LeBouef and Dr. Thomas F. Dreher for the murder of the woman's husband, again has been thwarted, at least temporarily.

The execution was stayed by the Supreme Court yesterday to permit counsel for the defense 15 days to file an appeal from the court's majority opinion holding that Chief Justice Charles A. O'Neill issued a null and void writ and denying a sanity hearing for the condemned pair.

The Supreme Court recently split over the case, the chief justice issuing a writ and the four other members present ordering the sheriff to proceed with the execution.

GOVERNOR UNDECIDED

Today, Gov. Huey P. Long is scheduled to pass on an executive reprieve for a minimum of 21 days, asked by the court. Last night the Governor declared he did not know what action he would take in regard to the request. If the reprieve is granted, it will be the third for the pair. The disagreement in the Supreme Court resulted in such a mix-up that the Governor issued a reprieve, several hours later rescinded that action, and then granted a second reprieve, which ended today.

The issuance of conflicting orders from the court on January 4 was declared in the majority opinion "directly opposed to government" when five justices said:

"It is obvious that the issuance of conflicting orders from the same tribunal cannot be sanctioned, for the issuing of them is directly opposed to government."

ORDER DECLARED VOID

"As such orders were issued in this instance, it is manifest that at least one set of the orders is null and void.

"The order issued by the chief justice, as highly as we regard his opinion, is null and void, ab initio. Being an absolute nullity, it was without effect from the beginning.

"The only valid order issued was the one by the four justices refusing the writ, which was the order of the court."

LeBouef, whose jealousy became aroused over the alleged friendship of his wife for the physician, was shot and knifed during a boat ride on Lake Palourde, near Morgan City, La., on the night of July 1, 1927. His body, weighted down with angle irons, was recovered from the waters of the lake six days later. Jim Headle, a trapper, drew a life term for his part in the killing.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—(AP.)—Frank J. Hogan, chief counsel for Robert W. Stewart, chairman of the board of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, in the latter's acquittal on charges of perjury before a Senate oil committee, declared in a statement: "Nothing could be further from the truth" that this verdict was based on a "technicality." The technicality reference, Hogan said, was said to have been contained in a letter sent by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., to stockholders of the company seeking proxies for its annual meeting next March.

Vet's Funeral Bill Raises Question

BUTLER, Pa., Jan. 12.—(AP.)—Judge James M. Galbreath has been called upon to decide just when the county is required to contribute $75 for the funeral services of an ex-service man as provided by law, the result of a suit filed by J. H. Cochran, executor of the estate of Joseph Blakely, against the county of Butler. The house is near a side hill and the deep drifts of snow had enabled the deer to reach the top of the house and the warmth of the chimney with little trouble.

CHICAGO HOTEL BOMBED

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—(INS.)—A powerful black powder bomb early today rocked the Martin Hotel building in North Clark street. The explosion virtually wrecked a cigar store in the front of the building.

Guests were thrown into a panic and rushed to the hotel lobby, many of them in sleeping attire. It was several minutes before order was restored. Meanwhile, crowds from the street swarmed into the bombed structure and added to the confusion.

The bombing was ascribed to a gambling war. In the rear of the wrecked cigar store, police said, a handbook was operated. The place also dealt in prize fight tickets and was a general rendezvous for the sporting gentry.

He still clutched between the thumb and forefinger of his right hand a pencil with which he had been writing a telegram.

HOOVER BUSY ON CABINET AND FOREIGN RELATIONS

By JAMES L. WEST,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—(AP.)—Besides a discussion of legislative and cabinet affairs with many among his hosts of callers here, President-elect Hoover is devoting no inconsiderable amount of his time and attention to a general survey of foreign relations.

He has gone somewhat fully into this subject with Elihu Root, international lawyer, former Secretary of State and one of the foremost of the "elder statesmen" in Republican party affairs, and also with Frank B. Kellogg, Secretary of State, and several others.

Those who profess to know Mr. Hoover best are firmly of the opinion that after he enters the White House on March 4 he will give personal attention to foreign policies and problems, and especially to relations with Central and South America, a field now regarded somewhat generally as the first line of American diplomacy, and especially one for career diplomats.

Cabinet appointments and the legislative situation, especially the farm relief program, entered today into the conferences the President-elect had arranged in closing his first week in Washington since election day.

Prominent on his list of callers were Senator Couzens, of Michigan, who is expected to give voice to his opposition to the reappointment of Secretary Mellon; Chairman McNary, of the Senate Agriculture Committee, and Chester Gray and Samuel Thompson, of the Farm Bureau Federation.

WAVERLY, N. Y., Jan. 12.—(AP.)—Chief of Police Dana Boyle has received a letter from Mrs. Charles M. Whitelatch, of Claysville, Washington county, Pa., in which Mrs. Whitelatch expressed a belief that a bundle of blood-stained clothing, that of a child and man, found along a railroad here several weeks ago might have belonged to her husband and small daughter, who disappeared in December. Mrs. Whitelatch said she resided with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Burrews, of near Claysville, and that she had heard nothing from her husband since he disappeared.

"But it will not happen again," she said. "I have no intention of ever taking another drink."

Doomed Slayer Asks Jazz Band For Funeral

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 12.—(AP.)—The parting requests of men who go to death in the electric chair at Ohio penitentiary generally are granted, especially as far as epicurean "send-offs" are concerned. But when the request involves a large amount of the insurance money—that's another story.

John Bradshaw, Negro, requested a very modest dinner before his execution last night and added that he wanted his wife to spend his $900 insurance for a 25-piece jazz band to play at his funeral and a marble statue over his grave.

CALIFORNIANS AID IN POWER TRUST PROBE

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Jan. 12.—Records of the investigation by the state Senate, in 1923, of the campaign conducted by the hydro-electric power companies against the water and power act, are to be used by the Federal Trade Commission in its nation-wide probe of the power trust.

That was made known yesterday by Senator H. C. Jones, of Santa Clara county. Andreas Lundquist, of San Francisco, attorney in charge of the Pacific coast office of the commission, Senator Jones said, has obtained from the Californian a certificate copy of the records of the state Senate probe together with testimony taken by the Jones committee and other data.

This, Senator Jones revealed, will be sent to Washington to be used in connection with the commission's inquiry into the "power trust" activities.

STARTS FEDERAL PROBE

The California solon commented upon what he said was a certainty that the effect of the Senate investigation six years ago into the methods employed by the power corporations against the first water and power bill and the work accomplished by his committee, undoubtedly had an important bearing upon the probe that has been undertaken by the Federal Trade Commission.

The California investigation discovered that many thousands of dollars had been expended by the power companies in "propaganda" operations in the campaign.

It was revealed that from the huge campaign fund persons active and prominent in civic organizations of all kinds had been paid to disseminate propaganda, although not identified during the campaign with the various power companies involved in the fight.

IN POWER TRUST PAY

Senator Jones recalled that the methods then employed were such as to camouflage, as he put it, the fact that the propagandists were actually in the pay of the power companies.

It was only under the investigation by the Senate Committee that the conditions were disclosed.

These hired propagandists were drawn from labor unions, social and civic bodies, commercial "leagues" and "associations" and like organizations.

"Similar practices" said Senator Jones, "have been uncovered by the Federal Trade Commission, only a tremendously wider scale. The power trust campaign, as has been fully demonstrated, has been carried into public schools, colleges and universities besides many other institutions and organizations disguised as honest and disinterested advice."

Walter Damrosch and the National Orchestra will play the world radio premiere of Ernest Bloch's "America: An Epic Rhapsody," which won for Bloch the $5,000 prize offered by Deems Taylor. This specialty comes over WCAL at 8 o'clock.

ARCTIC BROADCAST

More than 300 messages will be read to Royal Canadian Mounted Police, Commander Byrd and his men and others at the extremities of the earth, tonight at 11 o'clock over KDKA. Louis Kaufman will have charge. A special musical program has been arranged, including selections by the Winchester Band and the Lincoln University Quartet.

Col. Charles Lindbergh will invade the ether also. He will be the principal speaker at an Aviation Banquet in Philadelphia, which will be broadcast at 8 o'clock by WCAU, 256 meters.

Little Jack Little has migrated to Chicago. He will be heard over KYW, 294 meters, at 10 o'clock.

These are the outstanding radio lites for the evening. The programs abound with other features.

TO DESCRIBE TUNNEL RIDE

We can hardly wait till the Oriental Limited gets on its way through the Cascade Tunnel. The feature writer for the National Broadcasting Company has described this broadcast so vividly that we itch to hear the grinding of the wheels, Graham McNamee's farewell, Herbert Hoover's speech, the voice of Schumann-Heink and world famous figures in politics and business.

This broadcast will be the most intricate ever attempted. Engineers of the NBC will pay their tribute to master builders by switching a nation-wide radio audience from New York studios to San Francisco and Washington, and to mountain points between—all synchronized with the running time of Great Northern's crack flyer, the Oriental Limited, on its maiden trip through the eight-mile shaft.

The time for each detail will be governed by the inexorable second-hand of a stop watch. In turn, stop watches will be synchronized with electric clocks on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, adjusted to the second with clocks that govern the operation of the Oriental Limited.

TO TELL OF TRIP

By throwing a switch, NBC engineers will shift the center of the network from New York to the eastern portal of the Cascade Tunnel just as the train approaches. There it will come to a momentary halt, while McNamee presents Ralph Budd, president of the Great Northern Railway. Then both will spring aboard the starting train, and as its lights disappear other switches will be thrown and radio listeners will be transferred back to New York and Washington and again to San Francisco before the Oriental Limited emerges from the western end of the tunnel.

At the western portal another microphone will pick up McNamee's description of the first trip through what is said to be the longest tunnel in the Western world. As the train moves out of the broadcast picture and gathers speed on its final dash to the Pacific Coast, McNamee will remain behind with Mr. Budd. The latter will again take the microphone to introduce the next speaker, thousands of miles away in Washington, D. C. We presume this will be Herbert Hoover and that he has been placed on this part of the program that he may give his impression of the Oriental Limited's maiden trip as pictured to him over the radio.

ACTION SWIFT

The program will close with more music by George Olsen in the New York studios of the National Broadcasting Company.

The action in this broadcast should be swift and interesting. It will be radio history.

Only the second movement of Bloch's "America" will be played by the National Orchestra. This Mr. Bloch has called "Hours of Joy—Hours of Sorrow—1861-1865." The movement contains melodies from old Southern and Negro ballads, with snatches of "Old Folks at Home," "Hail Columbia," "Dixie" and "The Battle Cry of Freedom." At the close of the movement, Virginia reels are played by oboe and English horn; "Hail Columbia" is sung by the trumpets in 4-4 time, with the weasel popping in 12-8 time in the strings and wood.

ONCE SOLD CLOCKS

Ernest Bloch, the composer, is a native of Switzerland, who is now director of the San Francisco Conservatory of Music. While struggling for his early musical training, he sold cuckoo clocks in Geneva.

E. M. Herr, president of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, has prepared a message to the peoples of the world which will be read at 8:55 p. m. over KDKA.

For a good evening's entertainment we would suggest the Lincoln University Quartet, 6:10 at KDKA; Whitehouse Orchestra, 6:30 at WCAE; newspaper play, "Copy," by The Strollers, 7, at WCAE; piano recital by Mary Louise Jeffries, 7:30 at WCAE; rendition of Bloch's prize symphony, "America," over WCAE at 8 p. m.; Col. Lindbergh's speech from WCAU, about 8:45; opening of Cascade Tunnel at 9 from WCAE; Little Jack Little from KYW at 10 o'clock and the Arctic and Antarctic broadcast from KDKA at 11 p. m.

NEWSPAPER STORY.

"Copy," the one-act play which the Strollers will present is a newspaper story. The action of the play takes place in the composing room, and it is filled with all the hustle and bustle which the getting out of a big newspaper entails.

Efficiency bordering on tragedy is shown in the daily life of the city editor, David Lay. By his co-workers he is considered hard-boiled, and it is all just "copy" to him. Unlike the popular newspaper plays now on Broadway, this one contains not one word of profanity, which is much in its favor.

The members of the cast of "Copy" visited the huge plant of the leading Pittsburgh newspaper today for the purpose of getting atmosphere. The cast includes Claude Morris, David McDonald, Gerard MacAfee, Willard Mead, Egbert Wilson and Ralph Caplan, under the direction of Mae Sweeny.

Radio Quits When Actor Twits Ex-Kaiser

BERLIN, Jan. 12.—(AP.)—The sudden interruption of a radio program when Paul Graetz, prominent actor, started to recite a lampoon on the former Kaiser at a benefit performance for the family of another actor, has led to accusations by radio fans that the broadcasting was deliberately cut by a supervising official. The postoffice authorities, which have authority over broadcasting declared that the interruption was due to a temporary disturbance, but the newspapers openly express doubt on this explanation.

MAN WOUNDED, LIPS SEALED

Members of the homicide squad were confronted with a mystery when Joe Manini, 46, of 17 Reed street, walked into Mercy Hospital last night with a wound in his body. Asking for medical aid, the man, police say, refused to tell hospital attaches how or where he was injured. The police then were called but they, too, met with the victim's refusal to answer their questions. Whther the wound was caused by a bullet or a sharp knife has not been determined and an X-ray will be taken.

New Find Backs Spain's Claim To Columbus

MADRID, Jan. 12.—(AP.)—A document found in the archives of Pontevedra Parish mentioned that place as having been the birthplace of Christopher Columbus. It thus bears out the claim that the discoverer of America was a Spaniard and not a native of Genoa, Italy.

The document contained a description of the burial of Columbus and said that the Duke of Veragua, descendant of the mariner, had sold in the eighteenth century the lands on which stood the building where Columbus was born.

TREES' COUNTRY ESTATE AT MARS

Joseph C. Trees, multi-millionaire oil operator, recently began embellishing his mansion at Treesdale Farms, Mars, with several stately elm trees. Today it is regarded as an indication that he intended to brighten the grounds for himself and his bride, Miss Edith Lehm, Dormont. The huge elm, shown in the foreground, was moved 10 miles from the grounds of the Thornhill County School for Boys at a cost, it is said, of $10,000.

CRASH DRIVERS' BAN URGED

Substitution for compulsory automobile insurance of a plan whereby any person failing to satisfy a judgment for damages growing out of an automobile accident would be deprived of the right to drive a car until he paid the claim was urged before the Chamber of Commerce Casualty committee yesterday by Edson S. Lott, president of the United States Casualty Company.

Declaring that compulsory insurance had created "a muddle" in Massachusetts, Lott urged that such legislation be opposed here. He suggested a modification whereby a driver found liable for damages would be required to post bond against further liability, after he had paid the first claim.

He also declared the states should adopt a uniform drivers' license act and that such an act should incorporate a reciprocity provision governing accident liability.

MEYER PLANS TO QUIT AS U. S. PROSECUTOR

According to rumors, Mr. Meyer desired to resign as district attorney last summer but hesitated because of the rum ring conspiracy cases now on the court dockets. Mr. Meyer has pointed out to his friends, it was said, that he is continuing in office at a financial loss, due to neglect of his private practice.

His term has almost a year to run. He was appointed for a four-year term in July, 1925, but did not receive his commission until December.

CITY FIREMEN, NOT PAID, ASK REASON

City firemen are asking what has happened to their wages for the last 16 days of December. This pay, they say, was due January 8, but at every fire house in the city the fire-fighters still are waiting for the paymaster's car. The same thing, it is said, applies to the police, their pay also being long overdue.

What the firemen want from City Council or whoever may be responsible for the frequent delay in pay days, is the assurance that when pay day arrives they will be paid. Veteran firemen are inclined to place the blame for the delay on City Council.

Chairman Robert Garland, of Council's Finance Committee, said he was unable to explain the cause of the delay. He pointed out that Council had appropriated money for th city's expenses during 1929 and that the payroll problem was one for the various departments.

The firemen assert that the failure from time to time to meet the regular pay is not only embarrassing to them and their families, but also costly. They say they are dunned by creditors, and often have to fall behind in making payments on homes. They say that when pay day arrives with no pay forthcoming, firemen, unable to borrow from relatives or friends, have lost the rebate allowed by landlords and gas and electric light companies, or, unable to meet their telephone bills, have had their service discontinued. Failure to pay on time, they say, means an average loss of $5 to $8 a month.

The majority of the firemen say they could well dispense with the slight pay increase recently granted them if they could be certain they would be paid on time. This raise in wages was 7 to 9 cents a day for all men receiving $2,040 a year or less. It becomes effective July 1. The scheduled pay days are twice a month, usually falling on the eighth and twenty-third.

COUNCIL WORKS TO CUT DOWN ON SMOKE

The city of Pittsburgh is going to attend to its own smoke stacks before it attempts to tell individuals and corporations how to go about preventing too much smoke.

To this end Council has requested Harry B. Meller, chief of the Smoke Regulation Bureau, to obtain consent of the Water Bureau for the installation of a smoke consumer at Brilliant pumping station, a smoke ordinance violator, as an experiment to be repeated at other city-owned buildings.

Attention to the city's own violation of its own ordinance was called to the attention of Council by a picture obtained by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph of one of the Brilliant stacks belching smoke. Councilman Robert Garland offered the picture as an evidence of violation.

Dr. E. R. Weidlein, director of Mellon Institute, was invited to observe the tests to be made at the station.

The Brilliant station case and many other angles of the smoke problem were discussed yesterday when Council held a "smoke" hearing. President James F. Malone said that Council "must, can and will eliminate objectionable smoke from Pittsburgh." Malone said Council realized the recent prevalence of smoke irritated residents, brought unfavorable publicity to Pittsburgh and promised that Council would "go the limit to regain the city's reputation for clear skies." He also made clear, however, that Council wished to avoid discouraging the coal industry here and abroad.

WOULD ENFORCE RULE

Council authorized Meller to begin today selecting 10 mechanical students specializing in fuel combustion at Tech and Pitt as additional smoke inspectors. They will be exempt from Civil Service rules, will be under Meller's supervision and will work four hours a day for three months at 75 cents an hour. In event the test at Brilliant is successful, Meller was authorized to present legislation amending the existing smoke ordinance or a new bill which would compel installation of smoke consumers in all boilers and furnaces where necessary.

Meller reviewed the history of smoke regulation here. He said dwellings had been omitted from the provisions of the present ordinance, as they generally used gas for fuel, but recently there was a change from gas to soft coal. He said the bureau had supervision over 10,000 stacks, and that one of the obstacles to smoke control was inability of a fireman to see the smoke coming from a stack.

Among those who discussed the situation were W. A. Zahn, secretary-treasurer, and R. H. Geiger, heating engineer of the Smoke Consumers' Organizations of America; J. B. Corlock, chief engineer of the Pittsburgh works, Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation; J. H. Redding, general superintendent of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company; R. W. Kiser, president of the Alex Black Coal Company. Others who spoke were Dr. Weidlein, Mrs. Q. W. Hershey, Leagues of Women Voters, and Mrs. Ferdinand Fillion.

Western Friends Plan Royal Reception For Hitchcocks

FROM out California way we hear rumors about the reception that folks of that sun-kissed state are planning to extend to the junior Thomas Hitchcocks when they arrive there in the near future. Of course I don't need to tell you that Mrs. Hitchcock was Margaret McMon Laughlin before she was married in mid-December at the Hotel Plaza, New York.

The Hitchcocks have been spending their honeymoon on the yacht "Vagabondo, III," belonging to Mrs. Hitchcock's father, William Larimer Mellon, you know. They are making their way to California in time for the polo matches in San Mateo and Del Monte, in which Mr. Hitchcock will display his prowess once more. Their friends out West, and there are many of them, are planning to entertain them royally, I hear, during their not-so-long stay in California.

AN engagement of interest is announced today in the betrothal of Mary Ralston Crabbe, daughter of Mrs. William Ralston Crabbe, of Castleman place, to Dr. Paul Benjamin Ernst, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Ernst, of Beechwood boulevard. So far as I know there has been no date set for the wedding.

SCARLET riding coats worn by the men and the bright-hued frocks of the women, together with the colors of the Rolling Rock, Sewickley, Westmoreland, Pittsburgh and Indiana hunts, combined to make a gay scene at the dinner dance which the five hunts gave last night in the William Penn Hotel. The dinner was served in the ballroom, which was lighted with triangular white lights silhouetted with hunting scenes. The diners were summoned by the hunters' bugle.

I noticed the Richard Beatty Mellons and their son, Richard King Mellon, and their son-in-law and daughter, the Alan Magee Scaifes. Mrs. Mellon wore black velvet touched with rhinestones, while the former Sarah Mellon appeared in a frock of flame chiffon made with a flaring, bouffant skirt. Mary Mellon McClung was there, wearing a blue velvet frock, while another of last season's buds, Anne King Scott, appeared in orchid chiffon. Virginia Goldsbury was a guest, too, wearing chartreuse green taffeta.

Among others I saw Mrs. Herbert May, wearing bisque satin, and Mrs. Theodore F. Smith in black lace. Mrs. Donald Bakewell wore pale pink crepe and Mrs. Donald Scott Rodgers appeared in green satin. Two girls whose engagements were announced within the last few weeks were there, too. One of them, Margaret McClintic, wore silver green velvet and rhinestones, and the other, Mary Louise Johnson, appeared in white satin.

Mrs. Simon Patterson appeared in red crepe, while Mrs. Dorwin Donnelly was gowned in scarlet velvet. Mrs. William C. Robinson wore black velvet and Mrs. Charles L. Snowdon, Jr., appeared in brown crepe and net with a cocktail jacket of gold sequins. Jane Allderdice, one of our debutantes, was there wearing cream satin, while her sub-deb sister, Nancy, appeared in flowered brocade with a skirt of gold net. Mrs. Harry Darlington, Jr., wore a gown of black velvet and Mrs. Eleanor Scott Walker appeared in gold lace.

There were, in all, about 250 guests, I understand, and they were seated at tables decorated with bowl amber bowls and green vases filled with snapdragon, sweet peas, calendula, yellow tulips and jonquils.

* * *

A SMALL party of yesterday was a bridge luncheon which Mrs. Don Rose, of Bank street, Sewickley, gave in honor of her daughters, Anne and Margaret, who are going to make their debut next June. The guests were the girls' schoolmates at Miss Porter's School, Farmington, Conn.

College Club Hears Talk on Marriage

MARRIAGE, in its legal and historical phases, was discussed yesterday before the College Club by Miss Suzanne Beatty, assistant city solicitor, who made her talk the first in a series of three which the program committee plans to carry out. Miss Beatty, an attorney, spoke of the four kinds of marriage which history has known, marriage by capture, by purchase, the ecclesiastical marriage and "that greatly to be desired thing for which eminent men fought"—civil marriage. In discussing early marriage customs, Miss Beatty said monogamy had come out of group marriage as a result rather than a cause of the family, and that it was primarily a protection for the children. The lore of the marriage ring, infant marriages, which were once prevalent, and the long, hard battle for civil marriage beginning in England in the seventeenth century, were among other points interestingly discussed by the speaker. "It is interesting to note," said Miss Beatty, "that marriage laws have kept step with the development of civilization and have always had the protection of the children as their foundation. On later programs, divorce and modern marriage will be discussed by the club.

RANCHER MAY REJECT HIS EARLDOM

CALGARY, Alta., Jan. 12.—(AP.)—Frederick J. Perceval, rancher, said yesterday he was not sure he would change that occupation for a seat in the House of Lords as the tenth Earl of Agmont, his right through the death of a distant relative. A London dispatch had told of Perceval's raising to the peerage.

Perceval has been ranching at Priddis, 20 miles from here, for 26 years and he expressed no desire to leave his 515 acres in the Alberta foothills.

"I am not going to drop everything here like a red-hot horseshoe," he said. "No doubt I will have to go to the other side later, but I'm not in any particular hurry."

"Is there any possibility," he was asked, "that you will waive your claim to the earldom?"

"I wouldn't say," he replied, "but having lived in Alberta so long it would be a decided wrench to leaves it even for a seat in the House of Lords. I would be quite content to spend the remainder of my life here. After all, it is the real life, and I am not sure that I will change it."

3 GAS VICTIMS DEAD 12 DAYS

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—(AP.)—The bodies of two women and a man, believed to have been dead since New Year's eve, were found yesterday in a gas-filled apartment on the top floor of a house in the mid-town section.

An employe of a gas company, repairing a gas stove in a vacant apartment next to that of Miss Mamie Clark, 50, which was the only other apartment on the top floor, detected the odor of gas. He called a patrolman and they broke into the apartment. They found the bodies of Miss Clark, Miss Nora O'Donnell, 40, who lived with her, and Joseph Brendel, 38, all of New York. Three burners were open on the gas range in the kitchen and two burners were open on a chandelier in the bedroom.

Occupants of the house, none of whom had noticed the odor of gas, said they had not seen or heard the two women since New Year's eve, when a party was held in the apartment. Police were undecided whether the gas jets were opened purposely or by accident.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Jan. 12.—(AP.)—Using the largest force ever brought into Milwaukee, the federal prohibition department, under the direction of W. Frank Cunningham, deputy administrator, last night struck at the source of liquor near the National Soldiers' Home.

Fourteen barrooms were raided simultaneously by 42 agents. Eighteen arrests were made. Cunningham had received complaints that sick and disabled soldiers at the home were being sold moonshine.

TEACHER WINS IN NEW TENNESSEE 'MONKEY' CASE

JAMESTOWN, Tenn., Jan. 12.—(AP.)—Firecrackers playfully touched off during a Christmas celebration at the Clark Range County high school here started a train of events that threatened a second Scopes case, but the teacher, accused of violating Tennessee's anti-evolution statute, Prof. Ellmore Gentry, won a sweeping victory yesterday.

Charges of teaching the theory of evolution in violation of the state law, and of assault and battery filed against Gentry by the fathers of two boys he suspended as a result of the Christmas prank, were dismissed by the Fentress County Board of Education, which accepted Gentry's defense that he had not taught evolution. He admitted, however, that he had permitted an "outline of history" to be placed in the school library.

The prosecuting witnesses and their attorney did not appear, but the board decided to proceed with the case and heard the testimony of Prof. Gentry. After giving the principal a clear bill, the board went into executive session, while the 103 spectators and three newspaper correspondents who had heard the proceedings, filed out of the court.

The two accusers were F. O. Dixon and B. L. Jones. Dixon said he did not push the charge because he believed the board had no authority to punish Gentry for violation of the law.

Dixon said he had not decided whether to swear to a warrant against Gentry. Both Dixon and Jones said their sons, who had been expelled by Gentry, had been reinstated, but would not return.

"I don't want my boy to be taught evolution," Dixon declared.

One development that may result from the case is a bill to repeal the anti-evolution law. Representative George L. Stockton, Fentress county, who came here from Nashville to "help in saving Jamestown from having a Dayton monkey trial," said he would introduce a repealer, not because he wanted evolution taught, but because "the monkey bill is permitting people to make monkeys out of Tennessee."

MUSIC

Philharmonic-Symphony Society of New York

SYRIA MOSQUE

PROGRAM

Overture to "The Flying Dutchman" ..... Wagner.
"Waldweben" (Forest Murmurs) from Siegfried ..... Wagner.
Wotan's Farewell and Magic Fire Scene, from "Die Walkure" ..... Wagner.
Tone-Poem "Ein Heldenleben" (A Hero's Life") Op. 40..... Strauss.

The Philharmonic-Symphony Society of New York, with Willem Mengelberg conducting, played a stupendous program in Syria Mosque last evening. Composed entirely of Wagner and Strauss, the music was often overpowering but never unbalanced; the Strauss work, dedicated to Mengelberg and his home orchestra in Amsterdam, was surely a labor of love, for never before has this fine musician given such a reading.

The "Heldenleben" necessitated the bringing of an augumented orchestra. Strauss has amply cared for all the instruments in his intricate score, so that all the fortissimo passages are musically logical and easily accepted. That this tremendous volume should be applied to Wagner's "Flying Dutchman" Overture certainly improved it none. It simply made the "Dutchman" a giant, "Senta" an Amazon, and the "Steersman" a chorus.

While this fullness of tone in the larger orchestra enriched the "Waldweben," one longed for the covering of the Bayreuth playhouse orchestra to blend much further the ensemble, and for a free baton that would permit at least the forest bird to sing without so inflexible a rhthym. Of the three Wagner pieces, the "Walkure" scene was by far the finest. The horn solo, replacing "Wotan's" voice, the great calm descending with the strings in the fire music were both surpassingly beautiful.

Then the return to the "Hero's Life," in which Strauss writes of himself so eloquently, leaving no doubt of his identity when he quotes generously from the themes of his works. The fine design of the tone-poem, its program, devoid of the banality of some later Strauss music, the avalanche of clever themes which keep pouring into the web of the music until the end, the sensuous beauty of its orchestration, its originality without sensationalism, all mark the masterpiece. Here Mengelberg forgot his academics, let loose the reins on the orchestra far enough to avoid deadening rhythms, and yet held his players so magnificently in his power, that this performance must remain the unforgettable one. Scipione Guidi played the solo violin in masterly style.

Today's matinee brings us Bach, Mozart and a Beethoven Symphony. The New York Orchestra is not to return next season. May there be a large audience to say farewell to Mengelberg in a program that, to him, must seem ideal.

"NANCY DEANE" by ROY L. FOLEY

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Nancy Deane, golden haired, dark eyed, has lived all her life with the O'Days in Washington, Pa.; for two years she has worked in the station lunch room to help pay the rent. There she meets John Blair who invites her to go to the circus. Nancy loses her job and learns she is really the granddaughter of the rich Montgomery Deane in Pittsburgh and that her mother, Julie Abbott, a circus performer, is coming to town and wants to see her. Nancy goes to the show with John and sees Julie drop from a trapeze; she rushes wildly to the hospital where her mother dies, telling her she loved her father. Nancy suddenly decided to go to Pittsburgh and Blair, whom she has grown to admire, gives her a letter to a college friend who runs the "Wear-Ever Mills." On the train she meets Ginger Varden, a model, who takes her to her own boarding house and invites her to share her room. Nancy is shocked at its disorder and doesn't know quite what to think of her new companion. Two friends of Ginger, Jerry Durant and Vic Flemming, take the girls to a party in the studio of a woman artist. Vic goes crazy over Nancy's blonde beauty and has a brawl with a man who he thinks is too attentive to her. In her amazement she meets Howard Wescott, the man to whom she has the letter from John. The next morning, disgusted with herself, she runs out of Ginger's room, hardly knowing where she is going.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER VIII.

SEATED on a bench in Juneau Park, Nancy pulled out the letter John Blair had given her addressed to Howard Wescott, Manager of the Wear-Ever Knitting Mills. It read:

"Dear Wess: This will introduce Miss Nancy O'Day, a friend of mine, who wishes to find work in Pittsburgh. She intends to take up some stenographic and secretarial work at Miss Brown's School of Business, at night, but needs to work in the day time.

"I heard you mention, not long ago, that this was your busy season. Perhaps you can find work for Miss O'Day some place in your organization.

"If so, you will greatly oblige your old college friend,

JOHN BLAIR."

Nancy turned the letter over and over. She read and re-read it half a dozen times. What would Howard Wescott think of her, the girl he had seen in such company last night—a half drunken brawl of a party, with its screaming, chattering, cigaret smoking women.

She opened her purse and took stock of her possessions.

The letter to Mr. Wescott.

Nine dollars and twenty-five cents in money.

A chocolate bar, broken.

A compact, some hairpins. The address of Mrs. Sweeney, a friend of the O'Days, on Forbes street.

The $9.25 represented all that stood between Nancy and the world. This would have to keep her going until her first pay day—and she didn't even have a job.

"Sitting here thinking about it won't help," she said to herself.

With a gesture of determination, she jammed her belongings into her purse and decided that right then and there she would start for the Wear-Ever Knitting Mills on Broadway.

It seemed hours before she reached the great buildings; before she stopped before "Unit No. 1: Employment Office to the left."

Her eyes fastened on the big black and gold sign; she could hear the hum of machinery, the unmistakable sound of the knitters. It was the same sound she had heard so often in the Washington Mills, which she had passed nearly every day of her life.

"Employment office to the left." She couldn't pull that door open. She was heartsick, homesick, frightened. And though she didn't think about it right then, she was hungry. She walked to the end of the block not knowing what she would do next. Then she started scolding herself, oblivious to anyone on the street.

"Nancy O'Day, you're a little coward. Open that door. Walk in. Present your letter and get a job. If you don't do that you'll starve and be a disgrace to Mud and Darry, and they're the dearest friends you have in the world. Beside they need your help. They're depending on you."

Mud and Darry O'Day!

Nancy's eyes grew wet now.

"Stop, Nancy O'Day. Will you stop that crying!"

She gritted her teeth and made a bee line for the door, grabbed the handle and fairly ran up the steps straight into the arms of a pleasant faced woman with gray hair parted in the middle.

Nancy thought she looked a little like Mrs. O'Day, only younger.

"Well, well, well," the woman laughed, "you are in a hurry, aren't you?"

The woman's pleasantness encouraged her. She pulled out the letter addressed to Howard Wescott and thrust it into her hands. The woman proved to be just the person Nancy was looking for. She said she was in charge of the employment of girls, that she would have the letter delivered to Mr. Wescott's office immediately—and would she please be seated?

As Nancy sat on the hard bench, she watched the girls who hurried through the passageway, office girls, factory girls, girls, girls, girls—she wondered how they all lived. What kind of homes they had.

"Mr. Wescott will see you, Miss O'Day."

The words brought her to her feet, and before she had time to be too frightened, she was standing in an inner office, thickly carpeted, before a large, glass-topped desk at which sat Howard Wescott. He had John Blair's letter on the desk before him. He rose, offered his hand, and asked Nancy to be seated.

Yes, this was their busy season! the mills needed girls. What could she do? What had she done?

Howard Wescott asked these questions almost in one sentence.

"I, you see, I—"

Nancy tried to tell him that she had never done anything much but work in a depot restaurant. She lied, foolishly:

"I've always stayed home, Mr. Wescott. I've never really worked before—"

No sooner had she uttered the falsehood than she hated herself. She thought of all the fine girls she knew who were working. She blushed. Mrs. O'Day had so often told her never to be ashamed of any kind of honest work.

"In that case I believe I'll have to put you sorting. It's very simple work and I'm sure you will learn very readily."

Howard Wescott was the soul of business courtesy. He wasted no words. He was just about to ring for the woman whom Nancy had bumped into the hall; he lifted his hand from the button, looked at Nancy closely, and asked:

"Where have I seen you before." He put his hand to his forehead, thinking.

Nancy thought that he must hear her heart pounding across the room. For the second time in the space of five minutes she found herself telling a lie.

"I don't know, Mr. Wescott. I don't think I've ever seen you before."

The gray-haired lady came in, noiselessly, and Howard Wescott asked her to show Nancy to the sorting room. She was to come to work in the morning.

All in all, Nancy hadn't been inside the doors of the Wear-Ever Knitting Mills for more than 15 minutes. She ran down the steps of the building and into the street. She wanted to dance, to sing. She had a job. She hummed a little song and headed toward Liberty avenue.

Ginger greeted Nancy's enthusiastic story of her new job with a loud laugh, and the more she thought about it the more she laughed.

"Oh, my Lord!" she said between her spasms of laughing.

"Can you imagine little Goldie Locks, our little lily of the valley, wastin' herself away in a dirty old factory. Sorting socks? A socks sorter. Oh, my Lord!"

She stopped laughing suddenly, pulled her cigaret from its long imitation ebony holder, and sat up.

"Say, Kiddo," she said. "You know I like you. Just taken an awful fancy to you. You're such a kind of an innocent, or something, an' I want to help you.

"How'd you like to go modelin'?"

Nancy had to ask her to repeat that.

"Modeling? Modeling what?"

"Why, modelin' clothes, stupid. Clothes. The glad rags that is so important to us females' lives, the sables and satins that us girls, be we 100 years or one hour old, just must have to make us happy."

She stood up, draped her ostrich trimmed robe about her pretty form, struck a haughty pose, and trailed across the room.

"This is what I mean, sweet one, this."

She trailed back, pirouetted about, holding open the sheer silk robe as though it were a sable coat and she was exhibiting its silken lining. She relaxed, came out of her pose, sat down and lighted another cigaret.

Her mouth went down in one corner. She leaned over toward Nancy as though she was going to tip her off to something very secret.

"My sweet old sugar cookie," she began, "I can see that you're as green as the well-known grass, but I like you. See? An' I want to help you. You just put yourself under my training for a week and I'll teach you the ways."

She paused to inhale from the cigaret.

"Ways, what ways?"

Nancy was beginning to be a little scared. Ginger seems so mysterious, so hard, all of a sudden.

THE ENVIED ONES

Drawn by Dorothy Flack

ENVY—the oldest vice in the world! The vice which has caused wars and heart-breaks and more unhappiness than anything else you can think of. You hear people say: "Oh, I'm not envious, BUT—I do wish——" whatever it is they may most desire.

You see a girl who has everything material that she may want. Jewels, gorgeous gowns, motors, beauty—all the things that seem nearest and dearest to a woman's heart. And she's constantly surrounded by a group of admiring, envious women wishing they could change places with her. She may be a stage favorite or a movie star, or be famous in any one of the ways in which women are famous in these days, and there are those who envy her every move and every lovely new thing she may get.

And she, in turn, is envious of the woman who has nothing but a curly head nestling close to her heart. The lovely lady would probably give up everything she has in the world for the feel of tiny rose-leaf fingers curled trustingly around hers and a wee golden head nestling into her shoulder.

And that's envy that does not harm. That's the envy which brings Love and happiness and makes this old world a better place for everybody.

For, after all, there's nothing so wonderful as Love. Love keeps us all going and gives us happiness which money cannot buy nor jewels take the place of.

So when you're being envious, be envious of Love, and in this way you'll finally find him for yourself.

Sayings of Mrs. Solomon

By HELEN ROWLAND

No Man Dissembles His Love.

MY DAUGHTER, I charge thee, be not deceived by false logic. Seek not to comfort thyself, saying, "Lo, this man loveth me in his secret heart, but lacketh the courage to confess it."

* * *

For, verily, when a man loveth a woman, neither locks nor bolts, nor distance, nor duty, nor dumbness shall keep him from her side!

* * *

Faint heart doth not hold him back. For when a man desireth a damsel, he feareth but one thing in all the world—even that some other man may win her!

* * *

Conscience doth not constrain him. For what man's conscience cometh into action until his heart hath gone on a strike? And what man's scruples trouble him, until after the kiss?

* * *

Prudence doth not restrain him. For a man's caution never awakeneth until his enthusiasm hath gone to sleep and his ardor hath begun to languish.

* * *

Self-denial doth not stay him. For the beginning of love is the essence of selfishness; and it is only in its mellow age, that altruism and self-abnegation tinge a man's devotion and arouse his chivalry.

* * *

Humility doth not deter him, nor modesty paralyze him. For no man is so lacking in vanity, that he doubteth in his heart that a woman could love him, nor so shy that he believeth himself without a chance.

* * *

Discretion doth not hamper him. For a man in love considereth not diplomacy nor wisdom, nor anything under the sun—save his heart's desire!

* * *

Then, I adjure thee, my Daughter, console not thyself with these sweet delusions.

* * *

For a man in love needeth no "encouragement" and naught in the heavens above, nor upon the face of the earth beneath can stay him from following where his heart leadeth. Nay, verily, neither duty, nor "business," nor "conferences," nor pride, nor fear, nor another woman!

* * *

For when a man loveth a woman, he heedeth not the trame signals, but maketh for the high road to the object of his heart's desire! And NO man dissembleth his love!

Horoscopes

Sunday, January 13

SUNDAY'S horoscope shows benefits and advantages for things ecclesiastical as well as for all vigorously pursued enterprises. Employment is under favor and all initiative sure of returns, but beware of small bickerings and restlessness.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of activity and aggressiveness, with things flourishing through initiative and diligence. Those in employment may look for preferment or honors, but shun petty quarrels and restlessness.

A child born on this day may be versatile and vigorous and may have many prospects of success and advancement in life, either in the employment of others or on its own account.

Monday, January 14

MONDAY'S astrological forecast shows many excellent personal and business prospects, but these generally are beclouded by a loophole for duplicity, fraud and subtle undermining. With this safeguarded against, there is hope of an important and profitable change of an abrupt nature. The purely personal affiliations are importantly involved, and with wisdom should bring much pleasure.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of important change, with the prospect of profitable business and pleasant personal affairs. There is an unexpected journey, but withal a menace of subtlety, misrepresentation or singular experiences. Precaution on all lines is recommended.

A child born on this day may be clever, ingenious and have many social graces and accomplishments. It may have a tendency to the crafty, subtle or singular, but will succeed.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Lady Doesn't Rise

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

My husband and I have been visiting some friends, and my husband remarked later that a lady, when introduced to a gentleman, should rise and extend her hand to him. My idea differs a little. I think that the woman should remain seated and extend her hand only if she is so inclined. N. S.

YOUR idea is better. The woman does not rise when a gentleman is introduced to her (by the way, the man is introduced to the woman, not as you state it in your question), and usually she does not shake hands. Unless, as you say, if she is so inclined, as she would be when she is meeting a gentleman of whom she has heard a great deal from a mutual friend and the introduction to whom she has been anticipating for a long time.

Ask Mother

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Some time ago I met a charming young man at the home of my aunt. I am deeply in love with him. I do not know whether or not he cares for me, but some time in the near future I am to have the honor of meeting him again at a party. Is it very rude or unmannerly of me to invite him to my home for dinner? C.

IT would be quite all right for your mother to send this invitation, but it wouldn't be good form for you to do it. A week or so after the party, if you still think that you would like to have him come to your home, have your mother write a note inviting him for a specified evening to dinner.

Don't Write First

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

A few weeks ago I was visiting a friend, and I met and went out with a boy friend of hers. Now I am at home. I would like to hear from him, but I know that he will not write first. Is it the best of manners for me to write first, or would this seem too anxious? BLUE EYES.

THIS would indeed seem too anxious, and would be in poor form. Don't lay yourself open to such adverse criticism as he will give you if he is a well-bred young man. Wait until he writes first. If he doesn't write, you will know that he doesn't want to, for these males, dear Blue Eyes, have a way of doing what they want to do!

The Second Marriage

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Is it customary to send a wedding present to a relative on the occasion of her second marriage? THE NIECE.

IF it is a close relative and if you are very fond of him or her, it would be natural that you would want to send a wedding gift. Otherwise, it would not be necessary, or expected. Wedding presents for second marriages are not very much done.

Madge Transfers Responsibility of Carrying Mary's Case

"I DON'T know what your wife is saying about us, Harry," Dicky observed as the two men came up to us, "but it's something irreverent and disrespectful. I know by the way her nose wrinkles. It's my opinion that a good whacking with a stick 'not bigger than your thumb' would do her all the good in the world."

"Doesn't make the slightest impression," Harry Underwood commented. "I know. I've tried it."

"I was only remarking," Lillian said demurely, "that I was ready to die, now, having witnessed the miracle of you two returning before the time you said you would."

"Where's Mary?" Dicky asked, abruptly dropping the foolery.

"Where do you expect any girl of her age to be?—at the nearest soda fountain," Lillian retorted.

"Then—will you excuse Madge and me a minute?" he asked. "This way, please, Madge."

He put his hand upon my arm and hurried me out of the main room so rapidly that I was almost breathless when he stopped in a comparatively quiet spot back of the stairs in the corridor.

"I thought we'd better get together on this, before Mary comes back," he said, and in his voice I heard the notes of comradeship which is the nicest precious to me of all the scale ever sounded in our association together. It is the note which I invariably hear when we are making plans for Junior's future, or discussing questions well outside the danger zone of jealousy—a note of cheerful reasonableness and comprehension of my thought which rejoices all that is best in me.

"You found her case didn't you?" he asked next, and I was not surprised at the question. I had felt that he knew of my possession of the missing books since the moment I heard him volunteer to telephone Katie concerning them.

"Yes, I did," I answered. "It held her check book and her bank book, if it had not been for what Marion told me of Mary's wardrobe, I would have given them back at once, but——"

"You needn't explain," he said reassuringly. "You did perfectly right in keeping them. We're justified in finding out what the child is doing with her very liberal allowance—or rather you are. I'm selfish, I'll admit in dumping the responsibility on you, but masculine hands are altogether too clumsy for this business, and you were so bully to her at the time of that masked dancer escapade, you have the only right to interfere or call her to account if it is necessary to do so."

His voice suddenly was raucous, shaky, and I knew that his reference to the masked dancer episode inadvertently had brought back to his memory the awful corollary of that affair, his belief, for a brief interval, that I was trying to poison him. The recollection was as torturing to me as to him, and I rushed into speech in the effort to banish it from both our minds.

"Oh, I hope it won't be necessary to speak to her about it," I said. "But I am afraid we ought to look over the bank book and check book."

"That, of course," he said. "Just now, however, suppose you let me put them inside my coat until I can return them to you tonight. I've told Katie to look for a flat case, and put it away for Mary if she finds it. I'll tell Mary that, but if you should happen to open your bag where Mary could see it, you'd have the devil of a time explaining to her."

He held out his hand and I placed the flat case in it with the feeling that I was transferring a heavy load from my shoulders to those of my husband. My heart was heavy with fear for Mary, but it also thrilled with the consciousness of a comradeship with Dicky which I had experienced but rarely in the last year.

How to Keep Well

By Royal S. Copeland, M. D.

Diseases Often Are Prevented by Tests

MUCH is being said these days about the importance of periodical health examinations. Many writers and speakers on the subject advocate having everybody take such an examination, suggesting the birthday as an appropriate date.

DR. COPELAND

There can be no doubt of the value, of the great importance, indeed, of such physical tests. Before Lindbergh takes a flight, no matter how short it is to be, he goes over his airplane with great care. He makes sure that every part is in perfect condition.

When a train stops after a long run you will see the engineer out with a hammer to test the wheels and other portions of the locomotive. The station mechanics make similar tests of the trucks and wheels of the passenger cars.

It is common practice to run the automobile into a garage now and again to have it looked over. Simple tests are made to determine its condition.

All these things are done with machines. Why not with men? Why will the owner or operator of an instrument of mechanical locomotion take such pains and yet never think of the machinery of his own body?

It stands to reason that with all the stress and strain of human existence, there must be a breakdown here and there. It would be remarkable, indeed, if there were not.

It is too bad not to check up on occasions. The birthday is a good time for this. All of us have birthdays. The day is likely to be one of meditation and perhaps of wonder. Why not wonder about the body that has carried you all these years? What is its state?

In one respect disease is pretty decent. It rarely makes an attack upon a human being without giving some sort of warning. That warning may not be readily interpreted. It may require an expert to recognize it.

That is why they are recommending this thorough test at least once a year. The expert physician who makes the examination will be able to recognize whether this or that condition he discovers, is one that should have attention.

Early care of almost any one of the serious ailments will permit its removal, or, at least, lighten the attack, so it won't amount to much. It is a wise man who bears this in mind.

Make a friend of your doctor. Place on his broad shoulders the responsibility for your welfare. Make him understand that you trust him and are looking to him to keep you well.

Those wise old Chinese discovered this ages ago. They hire doctors, not to get them well, but to keep them well. They are too smart to wait till they are sick.

You should be smart, too. You will be if you go and do as the Chinese do. Have the doctor paid to keep you out of a sick bed.

There is great value in the regular health test. If the body and all its organs, including the eyes, teeth and ears, are kept in good condition, it will mean much to you. It will give you a longer time on earth and will make you happier and more useful while you are here.

Answers to Health Queries

A. R. Q.—What would you advise for removing freckles?

A.—Try applying equal parts of peroxide. Follow this treatment by massaging with a good cold cream but it is liable to dry the skin.

Folding Linen

Instead of folding linen, such as tablecloths and sheets lengthways as is generally done, it is a good plan to fold them the other way occasionally, as they last much longer if the folds are sometimes changed in this way than if always folded in the same place.

GLORIA SWANSON IS "WIDOW" AS MARQUIS-HUSBAND GOES TO EUROPE

By REGINA CREWE

(Copyright, 1929, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 12.

GLORIA SWANSON is a trans-Atlantic widow again. The Marquis has scooted off to Europe leaving Gloria lonesome and forlorn at the studio. He will tarry for a day or two in New Orleans and then embark for the other side to continue his business. Gloria had planned to accompany him had "Queen Kelly" been completed in time. But it now develops that there will be at least six weeks' more shooting on the silent version of the picture before Director Von Stroheim tackles the problem of making the talkie. As soon as the picture is finished the Marquis will join Gloria in New York for a vacation either there or abroad.

As is usual with Von Stroheim productions, Hollywood is buzzing with stories about the possible [illegible] tion. One of these [illegible] is that the picture will be called "Pat and Mike."

Gloria Swanson.

[illegible] for promotion [illegible] The tale concerns two brothers [illegible] and a girl beloved by both. One lad [illegible] is a stalwart and honest "cop," [illegible] of the story reads, [illegible] is a bold, bad gunman. Milton will be both. And it will be the first dual role he has been allowed since the inception of his [illegible] talkie long career on the screen. The film is to be a Vitaphone production with its drama emphasized by sound. Frank Lloyd will direct and the chances are that Dorothy Mackaill will be the final selection as heroine.

along pole on their shoulders. Swung on the pole was a hefty lass which bore the pin and, apparently, of "Queen Kelly." Everyone thought "Von" was becoming skittish and that a joke was intended. But laughter faded from the faces of the producers when they felt the box actually contained reams and reams of manuscript and continuity. Perhaps the second half of "Queen Kelly" was tacked in on an elephant. But that story hasn't leaked out as yet.

Modern Story For Barrymore

JOHN BARRYMORE will work on the First National lot in the future. This is now controlled by Warner Brothers, and the valiant ones consider that the more swanky First National studio is more befitting a star of John's importance. As soon as he returns from his honeymoon cruise, things are all set for him to get to work to support his bride. The vehicle selected, however, is not "The Tavern Knight," as was originally announced. The Warners have a popular book up their sleeve for John, and while the title is still one of those Hollywood secrets, it is a modern story well suited to the star.

Director Frank Borzage, of "Seventh Heaven" and "Street Angel" fame, is all set to start on his third Janet Gaynor-Charlie Farrell picture. It is as yet unnamed, but the story is based on a magazine yarn by Tristram Tupper, "Three Episodes in the Life of Timothy Osborn." Janet and Charlie are the only ones selected for the picture. But the action centers chiefly about these two, and it will be some time before supporting players are necessary.

Janet Gaynor

Another New Yorker in town. Eddie Dowling, Broadway comedian, arrived today to begin work on a talkie, "Broadway Bound." Marian Nixon has the leading feminine role. In the party was Ray Dooley, stage headliner, who is Mrs. Dowling in private life.

Samuel Goldwyn has had a yarn called "Natchez" hidden away in the safe for some time back. He has decided that it will make a picture for Ronald Colman. That is why Joseph Hergesheimer, the author, is here. Joe will be working on the story, and the film has been tentatively titled "The River Gambler." It will be made following "Butldor Drummond," and will be a talkie. It is understood Joe has insisted that he be permitted to quit Hollywood the day the picture goes into production, and that he have absolutely nothing to do with its making. Meantime, he may find an idle moment here and there to take tea with the much-admired Alice Pringle.

Ronald Colman.

Sills to Play Dual Talk Role

MILTON SILLS does so excellently as the ballyhoo man in "The Barker" that First National has decided to give him two roles to play in his next picture. He will be both "Pat" and "Mike" in the screen adaptation of the magazine story bearing just that name—is that the title of the story "Pat and Mike"?

The tale concerns two brothers and a girl beloved by both. One lad is a stalwart and honest "cop," while the other is a bold, bad gunman. Milton will be both. And it will be the first dual role he has been allowed since the inception of his long career on the screen. The film is to be a Vitaphone production with its drama emphasized by sound. Frank Lloyd will direct and the chances are that Dorothy Mackaill will be the final selection as heroine.

O'Brien Heroine Is Nora Lane

NORA LANE has been selected as George O'Brien's heroine in "Son of Anak," which is to be his next photoplay. George, by the way, has quit being one of the airline's most consistent patrons. He has been in the habit of flying from Hollywood to Frisco where his family lives. But with the retirement of his dad as chief of police, the family headquarters will now be in the cinema city.

Coleen Moore is the first screen star to build a home containing a sound picture projection room. Colleen and John McCormick have just purchased a beautiful estate north of Beverly, where a 14-room residence will be built on one of the highest hills in the vicinity. There also will be Turkish baths, swimming pools, barbecue pits and extensive gardens, spread over three acres. The property is said to have cost $250,000.

Paramount and William C. DeMille have confirmed the news of the selection of Conrad Nagel, Bessie Love and Leila Hyams for the romantic characters in the new DeMille talkie, "White Collars." It will be translated for the screen from the Broadway success.

SOME NEW FILMS :-: WILL SHOW :-: FOLKS SEEN HERE

Nancy Carroll evidently hasn't heard winter is here. Nancy is featured with Gary Cooper in "The Shopworn Angel."

VARIED NOTE IN BILLS COMING

The second week of the engagement of Thurston, the magician, opens Monday in the Pitt. In "Gravitation Defied," the magician turns the Newtonian theory into an "Alice in Wonderland" dream. "The Lady or the Lion?" is a massive illusion. Matinee days are Thursday and Saturday.

Opening Monday at the Alvin, for one week will present Mae West in a New York dramatic success, "Diamond Lil." Matinees will be given Wednesday and Saturday.

Ryan and Lee in "One and Won Is Two," to be presented in the Davis two-a-day Keith-Albee-Orpheum vaudeville program next week, have an act claimed to be as bright as the season's variety bills will offer. Their routine banter is an exchange of humor. Van and Schenck head the bill.

ORIGINAL SONGS LISTED

Original songs in "Echoes of 1929," coming to the Nixon for next week only, starring Tommy "Bozo" Snyder, are: "I'm Looking for a Party," "Sally Ann," "Adeline," "Alabamad" and "After Showers Come Flowers."

Evelyn Brent becomes a "bad" woman on the screen for the first time in Paramount's all-talking version of the stage play, "Interference," to be featured in the Stanley next week. Doris Kenyon plays the other leading feminine role.

"The Awakening," starring Vilma Banky, will be the screen feature in the Penn next week, with Louis Wolheim in a prominent role. "The Magic Rug," stage presentation, will give prominence to Teddy Joyce and the Penn Stage Band.

HAS CONTEST WINNER

Lola Salvi, who has the feminine lead in "Plastered in Paris," next week's sound feature in Loew's Aldine, is a young Italian girl who was sent to Hollywood by William Fox, after she had won a beauty contest in her native land.

The drama that goes on behind the scenes in a theater is expressed in the Paramount production, "Manhattan Cocktail," co-starring Richard Arlen and Nancy Carroll and booked for the Enright, East Liberty, next week.

Adolphe Menjou and his bride, Katharyn Carver, in "His Private Life," a Paramount production, will be seen in the Grand next week.

Lena Daley, for many years a featured player in burlesque is at the head of "Step Along," which is coming to the Academy next week.

ROGERS NOW STAR

"Varsity," Charles "Buddy" Rogers' first starring vehicle for Paramount, is in the Regent, East Liberty, today. Mary Brian and Chester Conklin are in the cast.

Photophone in the Harris the first half of next week includes Frankie Darro in "The Circus Kid." Vaudeville includes Marietta Craig and Company.

In the Sheridan Square will be the first half of next week the Vitaphone feature "The Circus Kid," with Frankie Darro and Joe Brown. Vaudeville will include "The Melodious Maids."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Phyllis Holds Her Tongue

By ANN HARDY

WITH a brass-knobbed curtain-rod, St. John Ambers beat frantically on the ceiling. "And if you don't stop after that," he declared wrathfully, "I'll complain about your infernal noise to the landlady!"

He sat down again to his typewriter and tried to think of the proper word to rhyme with "buccaneer," for he was writing an atmospheric lyric for an adventure magazine which had to be in the mails not later than 9 a. m. next day. For some minutes quiet prevailed; the occupant of the room above had taken the hint conveyed by the curtain rod. St. John cocked one perfect black eyebrow ceilingward and grinned in smug satisfaction.

But as he began to type a dull thumping again sounded overhead. Thump-thump! Thump-thump! How in the devil could anyone concentrate with such a nuisance going on? St. John unwound his long legs from the straight chair on which he had been sitting, hunched over the typewriter, strode to the door, yanked it open, stepped into the hallway and vaunted upstairs to the third floor. His irritation was such that he didn't hesitate to bang on the panels of the thumper's door. Instantly the thumping ceased, there was dead silence, then steps across the room within.

The door was opened cautiously, but St. John didn't wait to catch a glimpse of the bird who for the past three days had been ruthlessly destroying his inspiration with a perpetual gymnastic din. "Cut out that darned thumping!" the young poet and litterateur yelled through the widening crack in the door. "By George, I've a mind to wring your neck—oh, I say, excuse me, please!"

A stout, florid woman had flung back the door at his words and faced him, wrath in every line of her heavy features. It was very evident, too, that she had not expected a masculine caller, for even at the height of her indignation at the preposterous intrusion, she remembered modestly and hastily clutched the yellow silk kimono she wore about her ample form.

"Sirrah," exclaimed the lady, "I presume you're the person who has been constantly annoying me for the past three days, banging that awful typewriter, then you begin beating the ceiling, and come up here now to insult me. I won't have it—I'll call the police! I was told this was a quiet, exclusive place!

Speechless with embarrassment, St. John turned and fled. He shut himself in the seclusion of his room, his sanctum sanctorum for which he was paying entirely too much rent. He, too, had been assured it was a quiet, orderly place in which he could commune in peace with his soul, and complete the writing of the play which was to bring him fame and fortune, and incidentally open the door of Romance for him and Phyllis Wade. Seafaring lyrics and adventure stories were pot-boilers, until his play had been accepted. One must eat.

And now the solitude was ended. Just as he was concentrating on the final act of his masterpiece, that fat woman had moved upstairs. She must be prosperous, for she had taken the large, front room over his smaller and cheaper one. St. John knew if he complained to the landlady, and the portly front-roomer on the third floor, who was so assiduously trying to reduce her avoirdupois also complained, just which one of them would be requested to leave. A helpless wrath possessed him. He did not dare touch the typewriter again.

Putting on his coat and hat, he went out into the park, where he sat on a bench, and with paper and pencil forced his harassed brain to conjure rhymes. It took him nearly three hours to complete the lyric, and then it was time to dress for dinner. He was to dine with Phyllis, meet her aunt and uncle, of whom she had always spoken vaguely. Phyllis had seemed particularly anxious to have him meet Uncle Prescott for some reason.

St. John returned to his room and dressed for dinner. As he was about to switch off the light, after contemplating his slim, correctly-clad image in the long mirror of the dresser with some satisfaction, he remembered the pencilledlyric lying on the reading table, picked it up and read it. In spite of its trivial destination he felt a glow of something akin to pride. He had put something into the rhyme that pleased him. He tucked the paper into his vest pocket, thinking he would show it to Phyllis, who was interested in everything he did.

The Wades' butler told him Miss Phyllis was waiting for him in the drawing room, and St. John hurried to greet her. She was dressed in a pale green chiffon wisp of a gown, cut low over her perfect shoulders.

Her Titian hair was called at the nape of her neck, and one bewitching curl had escaped and brushed her cheek. St. John, who was by nature a diplomatic youth, remembered to admire her gown. "Those simple things look so well on you," he said, holding her slim hands. "You've got the perfect figure to wear them; I never could admire a fat woman."

"Well, pretend desperately to admire one tonight," Phyllis commanded, and though she laughed her eyes were very grave. "Uncle Prescott's here, and I've told him of your play. He's immensely interested in the theater, and very wealthy. If you could only get him to back you the play would be as good as accepted. But to do that you must also please Aunt Myra, his wife, for he consults her and is guided by her judgment in every investment he makes."

"So that's your surprise about your uncle?" St. John exclaimed.

"Yes. I started to keep it a secret until you met him," Phyllis explained. "But I was so dreadfully afraid you'd make a bad impression on Aunt Myra. Let's sit here by the fire until dinner's ready. Uncle Prescott just got in from Chicago, and though Aunt Myra came on a week ahead of him she hasn't been staying with us. She has had some mysterious business to attend to. I've a suspicion she's been taking a course in some beauty culture—she's a dreadfully vain woman."

"Let me read you a little thing I dashed off this afternoon," said St. John, who wasn't at all interested in Aunt Myra, or in Uncle Prescott either, except as a means of putting his play on the boards. "It's called 'The Buccaneer,' and I never thought I'd finish it. My brain just went sluggish. Then I was bawled out by a horrible fat woman who's taken the room on the third floor above mine. I'll have to change my boarding-house if she stays there. Haven't had a moment's peace for a week, what with her skipping rope and exercising over my head! The noise was so terrific I thought it must be a man, so I went up to ask him to be quiet—and you should have seen the way she flayed me!"

Phyllis laughed heartlessly. "So you wrote a poem to appease your wrath!"

"Just that. And it's good too—one of the best things I've done. In fact the more I think of it the more I'm convinced it contains the germ idea for a new play. But let me read it to you, dearest."

Phyllis agreed that it was good. "There's a swing to it," she said. "There's a dash to the lines. You should see more of this lady, if she makes you write like that. Oh, Aunt Myra," she broke off to exclaim. And St. John arose, turned to the door, and dropped his jaw. There was silence—the fall of a pin could have been distinctly heard. St. John's olive complexion turned a dull, brick-red.

"I've seen this young man before," Aunt Myra said, eying him coldly. She was the portly lady who's gymnastics had played such havoc with his peace of mind!

"I'm glad you've met," said the innocent Phyllis. "He is a writer, you know, and he's just read me the most wonderful poem he composed this afternoon. It was inspired," she added mischievously, "by a lady who gave him a tongue-lashing. Give the poem to me, St. John. I must read it to Aunt Myra!"

Phillis was a good reader, she put expression into the lines. While she read St. John looked miserably at Aunt Myra, and at first Aunt Myra looked scornfully and disapprovingly at him. But as Phyllis read he was astonished to see the change come over her full features, and the fine beatific smile.

"What do you think of it? Isn't it excellent?" Phyllis demanded.

Aunt Myra actually simpered, looked archly at St. John. "My dear young man," she exclaimed, "it's wonderful, wonderful — to have inspired that!"

St. John gulped and forced a smile. Phyllis looked from one to the other in utter bewilderment, but being a wise and discreet young person she held her tongue.

And St. John often told her it was to her silence in a crucial moment that he really owed his success, in winning the friendship of Mrs. and Mrs. Prescott Wade, and in finally getting them to back the play which made him famous. "One of the few women in the world," he often declared of Phyllis, his wife, "who, in trying and delicate moments know how to hold their tongues."

Ruth's Training Strain
Babe Pays Heavy Toll
Plan to Help Hockey

Bissonette's Handicap

Famous Fight Recalled

GRIND SOON MUST TELL ON BAMBINO

HOW much longer will Babe Ruth and his home-run wallops continue to be the top-line act on baseball's annual program? How much longer can the Bambino last as the contributor of the diamond sport's greatest thrills? Speculation on these points is revived by the increasing difficulty that history's mightiest slugger appears to experience in getting himself in shape for each succeeding season. Admittedly, there was nothing in his form of 1928 to indicate any danger of an early passing, yet the extremes to which Ruth finds it necessary to go every winter in order to attain the required degree of physical fitness for the pennant race to follow bring fandom to a realization of the fact that he cannot travel on forever.

Babe Ruth

Strenuous off-season training, followed by spring practice and six months of hard baseball, must necessarily exact a heavy toll, particularly when the athlete concerned is as old and as ponderous as the Babe, and it is a question whether the swat king will be able to stand for any great length of time to come—as baseball distances go—the grind of continuous labor for almost the whole year round.

THREE weeks from next Thursday, Ruth will be 35 years old. True, ball players no longer are necessarily done or nearly done at that age, though there was a time when they were considered old at 30, as big leaguers, at any rate. Honus Wagner carried on until he was past 43, while Ty Cobb was almost 42 and Tris Speaker was 40 when they checked out last fall.

But all of those stars had a great deal of trouble with their legs long before they were forced to give up, and in view of the fact that none of them had the great weight of Ruth to carry around it will be seen that the chance of the Babe's lasting as long as any of the men named is decidedly remote. The time may not be as far distant as his brilliant performances of last year would appear to indicate when Ruth's props will crack under the strain of lugging his 230 pounds through everyday ball games at the Bambino's characteristic spare-nothing pace.

SINCE the clamor for more scoring in the National Hockey League began, various leaders in the ice game have been seeking a remedy for the present unpopular conditions. Lionel Conacher, former Pittsburgh player, is said to be the man behind a movement toward that end that is being outlined by William V. Dwyer, owner of the New York Americans, the team with which Conacher is now connected.

Lionel Conacher

Dwyer announces that the next meeting of the National League his club will move for a change in the rules which it is believed will be productive of a greater number of goals.

"WHAT we think is needed is the elimination of the forward pass," says Dwyer. Under the existing conditions the puck may be passed out to center. Therefore clubs invariably put one of their men around mid-ice to receive the disc. Opposing teams, because of the legality of the forward pass, are thus forced to send players back to check the man who is allowed to loaf offside. That is what leads to too much defensive hockey. Make the players pass the puck straight across the ice or make them skate their mates onside. In this way you could do away with all the loafing, and encourage three-man rushes, such as featured the game before the forward pass was legalized. It would be conducive to more skating and more combinations.

"IN THE old days in Canada there were many high-scoring games. It was not unusual to have a 7-6, 6-5 or 5-4 result. There were practically no low-scoring games until the rules were tinkered with and this offside loafing was allowed. The present system compels all clubs to play defensive hockey.

"We realize that it is going to be difficult to induce the league governors to consider such a radical change. All the clubs are filling their rinks under the present system, and when similar motions are made some one always inquires 'Why monkey with the rules?' However, we are going to introduce the motion, and believe that its adoption would result in a great improvement in the game."

THE fact that a newcomer in the major baseball leagues hits as high as .320 in his first year, and ranks among the leading sluggers with the impressive total of 25 home runs to his credit, is no assurance that he is going to be a .300 clouter again the following season.

Consider the case of Del Bissonette, the Brooklyn first baseman, for instance. The figures given above represent Bissonette's record for last year. A very creditable showing, it must be admitted.

Del Bissonette

BUT when it is recalled that Del was hitting .350 for some time, only to fall off woefully toward the finish after Adolfo Luque, Cuban pitcher of the Reds, discovered that he couldn't hit an inside curve, it is by no means certain that he will be able to reach the .300 mark again in 1929. Luque struck out the Robin first sacker four times in one afternoon with that inside curve, a pitch that any good left-hand hitter might be expected to murder, and when the news traveled around the league, as it always does, other flingers proceeded to feed Bissonette the same kind of stuff, with equally successful results.

IT IS now a question whether Bissonette will ever be able to hit as well in the National League as he did last spring. Once the pitchers find a weak spot in a batter it generally spells his finish as a .300 man unless he finds a way in which to overcome that weakness. Most veteran players doubt Bissonette's ability to throw off the "Indian sign" that Luque and other hurlers had on him during the latter part of the 1928 pennant period.

"I doubt if he will ever hit as well as he did last spring," says one. "I've watched him fish for those inside downers and he simply can't connect with them. He can't get his bat around on the pitch. A change in his batting stance might help, but I don't believe he can make it. It is natural to him and he has used it too long."

ONE of Pitt's best football players and most popular athletes of two decades ago passed on in the death of Bill Leahy Thursday night at Burlington, N. J. Leahy, one of the leading linemen of his time in this district, was a member of the Panther elevens of 1909, 1910 and 1912 and won his letter each year. His coach was the late Col. Joe Thompson, and the captains under whom he played were Homer Roe, Jack Lindsay and Polly Galvin in the order named.

Among Leahy's team mates were such well-remembered players as Hube Wagner, Tex Richards, Doc Quailey, Tillie Dewar, Carl

BUCS FAVORED TO DEFEAT OTTAWA

BY CARL W. SHATTO.

THE Ottawa Senators, the most powerful and most-feared club in the hockey world a few years ago, are to be the guests of Benny Leonard's Pirates at Duquesne Garden tonight. Tonight's game will close the first half campaign for the Buccos.

Three years ago the Senators were the monarchs of all they surveyed, and they did plenty of surveying. They had a defense that was several degrees more rock-ribbed than Gibraltar. The club that could score a goal on Ottawa regarded its season as "made," and as for beating Ottawa—well, it simply wasn't being done.

But 1929 finds the Senators playing through another season, and in this present campaign the once feared ones are regarded as "just another club." Yes, a very welcome club.

The record of Ottawa's recent activities would indicate that when the big ones fall they fall very hard and very flat. The Senators have not turned in a victory since November 22, when they gained a 1-0 decision over the Maroons. Since that time they have engaged in 10 battles and have played to six defeats and four ties. In their last nine games the Pirates have won four decisions and a tie. If the records mean anything, the Bucs should rule heavy favorites to triumph tonight.

GAMES TONIGHT

Pirates vs. Ottawa at Duquesne Garden (8:30).
Les Canadiens at Montreal.
New York Americans at Toronto.
Detroit at Boston.

NIGHBOR INJURED

The Pirates returned home yesterday and the Senators arrived here today. The Pirates came from Detroit, where they dropped a 4-1 decision to the Cougars on Thursday night, and the Senators came from Ottawa, where they were humiliated, routed and overwhelmed by the New York Rangers the same evening. Statisticians employed to wrestle with the big scoring figures finished their tough assignment this morning, and the exact count as reported was: Rangers 9, Ottawa 3. It was the worst defeat absorbed by Ottawa since the year one.

The absence of Frank Nighbor, star center and poke check king of kings, from the Ottawa lineup undoubtedly is reflected in the ease with which the Rangers scored. Nighbor, the toughest man in the league to carry the puck past, has his leg in a plater cast and will not be in action tonight. His trick knee recently did a Leon Errol and he will be out indefinitely. Nighbor's absence will not grieve the Pirates any, but it may be regretted by Pittsburgh fans, for the poke check king plans to retire from the ice sport after this season.

SOCCER CHAMPS DEFEND TITLE TODAY

By TOM BIRKS.

Heidelberg and the McKeesport National Tube are ready for their highly important West Penn senior cup battle, scheduled for this afternoon at the Pitt Stadium, the soccer feature of the day.

The game, a cup final, finds the Green and Gold clad Heidelberg eleven defending its championship against a challenger dangerous enough to make the going exceedingly tough. The Tubers will not enter today's contest on the long end of the betting, but there are those who believe that the passing game of the McKeesporters will cause Heidelberg more than a little trouble.

Heidelberg plays a hard and fast brand of soccer football, the sort designed to get goals and to get 'em quick. Local teams in the past have found it exceedingly difficult to solve the whirlwind attack of the champions, who have ruled the local soccer roost for the past five years.

In Fagan, a sterling defense man, a great halfback line and McCosky and Buff Donnelli, two fine forwards, the Green and Gold presents about as strong a lineup of amateur soccer players as can be found in this country.

The final of the Cameron cup, featuring South Hills and Bridgeville will precede the West Penn contest. The main game will start at 2:45 p. m.

Sarazen Gets Tie In Miami Tourney

MIAMI BEACH, Jan. 12.—(AP.)—Gene Sarazen, winner of five Miami and Miami Beach golf tournaments in the last three years, came from behind the leaders with a record-breaking second round to tie Harry Hampton, Key West professional, for the lead at the conclusion of the first day's 36-hole play of the Miami Beach open championship here yesterday.

Their mark for the 36 holes of play was 141, Sarazen taking 74 in the morning, then a 67 to set a new course record. Hampton's card showed a 71 in the morning and a 70 on the second 18.

TEX As He Was Known to TAD

Improving the Boxing Game

THE two greatest figures in the promotion of boxing were James W. Coffroth, of San Francisco, and Tex Rickard.

Boxing in New York was at a low ebb before Rickard came. He had promoted shows in the West and had been successful. When he took over old Madison Square Garden he threw a dinner for the local scribes at the Biltmore and sat back as the boys made speeches questioning his ability to make money with boxing shows and paying $52,000 a year as rent for the Garden running one show a week.

Tex said nothing, just leaning back smiling as he puffed on a big Perfecto. He saw things in the future that the scribes were blind to. He saw boxers in the ring those days wearing bath house suits and ordinary street shoes. He saw barbers, ham actors and bum politicians up in the press row where working press men belonged. He saw holders of ringside seats laughed out of their rightful chairs by rowdies and gangsters. He saw the aisles full of loafers and gate-crashers blocking the view of seat holders.

That is the way fights were run in New York in most places. Rickard had seen boxing shows conducted on a high-class plane in San Francisco where Coffroth was boss. He saw people seated in their regular seats. He saw order. He saw shows put on without delay and without the mob ruling. Coffroth had an organization and he ran shows in a high-class manner.

Most of the Coffroth ushers could lick the fighters he paid to appear in the ring.

Tex remembered all those things when he came to New York and he finally lived to see them all work out right here.

He lived to see the Garden ushers in uniform give each patron the seat the check called for. He saw women by the thousands at this show. He saw the same order at his boxing shows as you could see in any theater.

At Reno, we recall how Tex fooled the newspapermen with his telephone booths. Just as you came in to the arena at Reno over the entrance and right in back of the last raised seat about 25 feet above the ground he had erected a row of covered boxes that looked like telephone booths. One of the scribes asked what it was for and Tex answered that it was for the convenience of those who wished to phone during or after the fight.

On the day of the big bout, the fronts of the 10 little telephone booths were covered with curtains and there behind them were Mrs. Rickard, Mrs. Jeffries and other women who were to look at the fight. That was the first effort Tex made to have women enjoy boxing without being molested.

And while we're on the mysterious phase of Tex, we might mention the secrecy maintained about the seating capacity of his Boyle's Thirty Acres. When the Dempsey-Carpentier thing looked to be a big card Tex announced that he was sorry he had arranged only for 60,000 seats. Speculators immediately bought every seat in sight. A few days before the bout Tex announced that it would seat 90,000. He had sold out his 60,000 seats and was sitting pretty. He let the specs worry while he disposed of his extra 30,000. Tex had no intimates, not even the specs.

World His Oyster

During his career, Rickard chased the elusive dollar just as far as any man that ever lived. He left Kansas as a lad and worked as a cowboy in Texas. When the gold rush to Alaska was on in 1897, he rushed to San Francisco and grabbed a stern wheeler for the Klondike. After that he was in South Africa. He didn't find wealth there, so he rushed into the cattle business in South America and that, too, proved to be a bubble.

The writer met Rickard on Broadway one sunny day after his return from South America and asked him if he intended going back into the boxing game.

"Don't know now," piped Tex in his jockey biting way. "I'm still half asleep from the South American trip. They're all half asleep down there. Might be a good place 25 years from now, after someone wakes them up."

That's all the news there was. Tex lit a new pill, hit his cane on the pavement and started down Flash Alley.

A few months later he stepped into Madison Square Garden and his first real big success.

Deserves Credit

Tex gets the credit for putting the boxing game on a high plane here in the East and he deserves it. Some credit is due others, of course, but Tex was the man who led the parade. The others may claim credit, but he finally put the perfect thing together.

He can answer as McCauley did when accused of stealing stuff from other authorities.

"I have sipped sweetness from the flowers in many fields, yes," he said, "but the honey is mine."

(To Be Continued.)

Stribling, the pride of the South, is to get his big chance against Jack Sharkey at Miami Beach, Fla., after all, through the efforts of Jack Dempsey, who has induced the balking Sharkey to go through with the match made by Tex Rickard in the latter's last as a promoter prior flourished prior to his recent untimely death.

PANTHERS GAIN EDGE IN CITY TITLE SERIES

By JESS CARVER.

Dr. Carlson's highly psychologized Pitt Panthers fooled the boys last night as they opened their annual three-game series with Carnegie Tech out in the Stadium pavilion. In the place of playing a whirlwind offensive game, they showed some defensive capabilities few folks, if any, thought was in 'em, and still managed to win, 41 to 14.

The Skibos were in a quandary. First, they couldn't work the ball close to the hoop for scoring purposes, and in the second place, they couldn't keep Pitt from popping away from most any angle betwixt the foul line and the hoop. What is one expected to do in a case like that?

ZEHFUSS STEALS SHOW

Paul Zehfuss stole the show as far as any sensational scoring was concerned by dumping in six hoops and one foul point, scoring a total of 13 points, one less than was recorded by the entire Tech ball club. Charley Hyatt, who usually flips in anywhere from a dozen to 20 points, didn't start the ball game and when he did get in, he only dropped five baskets through the hoop. He was credited with two assists, however, and played his usual brilliant floor game.

FIRST HALF SLOW

At half time, the count was 13-8. The first half was slow and uninteresting, but after the intermission, Pitt went to work like true disciples of the Carlsonian doctrine of "get them points," and run the score up to 31-8 before Tech could score. It was during this period of excessive point getting that Zehfuss bagged five of his six goals.

The Tartans are playing Penn State at State College tonight.

The lineup:

Hoppe and Greenleaf Split in Cue Play

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—(AP.)—Willie Hoppe and Ralph Greenleaf split even in two blocks of their handicap pocket billiards match yesterday, but Greenleaf lengthened his lead in total points. With two more blocks to be played, Greenleaf, former world pocket billiards champion, led, 1,254 to 509. He is playing 1,500 points to Hoppe's 1,200.

My Pal, TEX RICKARD

By JACK DEMPSEY,
Former Heavyweight Champion of the World.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—Tex Rickard, the greatest showman of all time, had a perfect training for his successful career as a promoter.

Many declared it was Rickard luck that made his exploitations a success. But those who really knew Rickard as I did realize that it was his long study of human nature that permitted him to make unusual and startling decisions and know that they would turn out to be big drawing cards even in the face of potential criticism. I say this because in my own case I feel no one else knew me as Rickard did. He could sense my slightest reactions and then show understanding of them that was uncanny.

Jack Dempsey.

Tex, it must be remembered, knew life at the top and bottom. He started his career as a cow puncher working on the ranges of Texas. Later he rode the ranges of South America. Those were pioneer days that called for real "he" men, and Rickard was a pioneer—a leader.

In South Africa he led diving expeditions for pearls in the shark-infested waters. Walter Fields, who was his companion for 29 years, has recalled to me how Rickard used to get a whole crew of native boys to form a circle in the shark-ridden waters while a white man would plunge into the center of them down to the bed of pearls. The native boys were a protection against the sharks. Rickard had discovered that the sharks would not attack the dark-skinned natives.

Braving the rigors of the Yukon, Rickard went into the North country in search of gold. It was a diversified picture of life that he had. From across the business side of the faro tables of old Reno and Goldfield Rickard had human beings ever under the miscroscope of his discerning eye.

It was no wonder his promotions always were a success. They were built on ideas he had proven in his own experience.

Tex told me many times that it was after the Gans-Nelson fight at Goldfield where he offered and paid the unheard purse of $30,000 for a fight, that he got the longing to promote big shows. He told me he loved the roar of the crowds and enjoyed rubbing elbows at the ringside.

Tex came to New York. The Constantinople of keen showman, and midst the scoffs of competitors became the greatest showman of all times. Knowing his public, he could devise unusual twists to all his shows. That marked him the master.

But Tex was best of course as a boxing promoter thought he always was taking fliers in other fields.

Came to Trainman's Aid

I remember two years ago I was traveling with him from Florida to New York. A train conductor gave him a "sob" story. He said he was about to lose a piece of property because he could not make the final payment on it. Rickard pulled out a roll of bills without flicking an eyelash and loaned him the money. Within a few months

GLICK BEATEN BY M'LARNIN; TEX HONORED

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—(AP.)—Fighting in his "lucky" ring, Jimmy McLarnin, blue-eyed Irish lad from Vancouver, stepped back among the top notchers last night by whaling Joe Glick, Brooklyn lightweight, into defeat in a blood-tingling 10-round battle, at Madison Square Garden.

The stirring struggle before a capacity crowd of more than 18,000 reopened the garden to boxing after the death of Tex Rickard.

Bruce Flowers, Negro lightweight from New Rochelle, N. Y., scored a technical knockout over Eddie Guida, promising New York youngster, in the ninth round of a 10-round semi-final.

The veteran announcer Joe Humphries paid tribute to the promoter "here in the monument to his genius, now to his memory."

Then the lights throughout the great hall dimmed. The crowd stood in silence and from Rickard's empty box shrouded in black, a trumpeter blew the notes of "taps." The hall was so quiet that the rustle of flags in the wind from the ventilators up in the rafters could be heard at the ringside.

Fourteen thousand fans witnessed the battle.

Miller recently also has knocked out Lope Tenorio and Jimmy McLarnin.

OLIVER, FIFTH SCORE LEAGUE UPSETS

THANKS to some sensational performances yesterday afternoon on the part of Fifth Avenue and Oliver, Peabody and Perry High Schools are leading their respective sections in the City League scholastic basketball chase today.

Both Fifth and Oliver upset the dope and displayed fine comeback spirit in recording triumphs over Schenley and South Hills. Fifth, defeated in the opening game by Peabody a week ago, played bang-up basketball in downing Walter Gross' quintet yesterday. The score of this game was 23 to 17. Reiter, Fifth Avenue guard, was the star of the game, bagging four field goals and sinking them at times when Schenley seemed about ready to pass the Uptowners.

OLIVER UPSETS DOPE

If Fifth's victory was surprising, Oliver's triumph was sensational. South Hills appeared to be riding high and mighty in the Section Two race, but was sent headlong down the chute of defeat by the North Side tossers yesterday. Oliver won with points to spare, the final count being 40 to 26. At half-time, Oliver held 16 to 9 lead and remained out in front at all times during the second half.

In a second Section One contest, South High had little difficulty in disposing of Ralston. The final score was 58 to 10. Goldstein dropped in eight baskets for the victors.

Allegheny Vocational was unable to worry Langley to any extent in another Section Two game and was defeated, 32 to 16. The victory was the first of the campaign for Langley.

DUKES PROTEST U. P. VICTORY

NEW WILMINGTON, Pa., Jan. 12.—Westminster College, 1928 Tri-State Conference champions, went into a tie for the league lead with Geneva here last night by defeating Duquesne University 28 to 25 in an overtime contest. The Dukes played the last half of the game under protest.

At the end of the first half, a disagreement arose as to the correct score. The Westminster scorekeeper's book showed a 15-8 count in the Titans favor, but John Holohan, graduate manager of Duquesne, who was scoring for the Dukes, declared the right count to be 15-9.

At the end of the game the score stood at 24-24, and had Holohan's score at half time been allowed to stand, the Dukes would have won by a 25-24 score. The lineup:

Tom Sharkey

THE remark credited to the late Tex Rickard that in his opinion Jim Jeffries was the greatest heavyweight of all time, leads William A. Muldoon, New York boxing commissioner, to repeat his old assertion that Tom Sharkey should have been given the decision over Jeffries, and with it the title, in their 25-round battle at Coney Island on November 3, 1899. "Referee George Siler made a great mistake when he gave the decision to Jeffries," Muldoon insists. "Sharkey outfought Jeffries by a wide margin during the first 18 or 20 rounds and was entitled to the championship. It will be remembered that in the last round one of Jeffries' gloves came off, which gave him a breathing spell while Siler laced it again. Sharkey was the aggressor practically all the way. The fact that he did most of the leading gave him a pronounced advantage. Jeffries fought entirely on the defensive, and while he inflicted severe punishment in the final stages of the bout he did not do enough work to entitle him to Siler's verdict and should have lost the championship."

CONLEYS MEET JENKINS

By JULIUS LEVIN.

One of the hardest fought games of the season looms in the Homestead District League tonight when the league-leading M. J. Conleys meet the reorganized Jenkins in one of the two battles schedulled at the Homestead Elks' Temple. The Conroys meet the Ackermans in the second contest.

Sterngthened by the addition of Johnny Pearson, Andy Benedict, George Ramsay and Eddie Siegle, the Jenkins quintet is confident it will hand John Bresko's passers their first setback of the season.

The Conleys are setting the pace with three victories and no defeats, while the Jenkins entry is in third place with two victories and one defeat. A victory for the Jenkins' passers will enable Boot Shop to take the lead.

DRIBBLES

The Korch Crescents of Rankin will be the attraction of the Y. M. H. A. Institutional League team tonight on the Y. M. H. A. floor. The reserves meet National Music in the preliminary game.

Wheezy Davis, star of the Conleys and Duquesne Light team, will be out of action for some time owing to injuries suffered while at work this week.

Ed Losman and Dom Demaria, Rauh stars, also play with the Boot Shop entry of the Homestead District League.

Frank Packard and Sticks Monohan have been taken off the roster of the Rauh Club in the County League. Packard has retired to devote his attention to baseball. He is a member of the Columbia Club in the Sally League.

volving worm, the Bucs may be able to reduce the gap that separates them from the third-place Boston Bruins. In their last four games the Bostonians have gained four victories and a tie, and the Pirates have found it impossible to gain on a team that won't lose. Tonight, however, the Bruins tackle the Detroit Cougars, and the Cougars are no nobody's underdog.

Tonight's game will mark the Senators' first appearance here this season, and they are likely to be greeted by a capacity crowd. The advance ticket sale, according to officials, has been exceptionally heavy. The probable lineup:

ARMOUR LEADS BIG FIELD IN L. A. OPEN

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 12.—(AP.)—The hazards of old man par, scattered with generous hand over the long canyon situated course of the Riviera Country Club, rebuffed the bids of all but one of the great field which engaged yesterday in the opening of the $10,000 Los Angeles open.

The veteran Tommy Armour of Washington, D. C., who in 1927 held the national open championship, alone of the 130 professionals and amateurs, was able to drub the old gentleman, clubbing him from his entrenchments with a brilliant 68, three strokes under a perfect score. This super card gave Armour a three stroke lead over the field. That distance behind were Horton Smith, youthful Joplin, Mo., sensation, George Von Elm, Detroit amateur, and MacDonald Smith, the defending titlist from the Lakeville Country Club, Great Neck, Long Island.

Far back of the leaders came four of the field whose golfing activities had brought better forecasts than their play turned out to be. The mark of 77 caught the inimitable Walter Hagen, Bobby Cruickshank of Purchase, N. Y., Joe Kirkwood of Australia and Leo Diegel of Agua Caliente, Mexico.

PORTLAND GETS BUSH

TEX'S PAYOFF "REP" WELL EARNED

By HARRY KECK, Sports Editor.

THEY are paying Tex Rickard the high compliment of always having proved himself to be a square shooter, a man whose word was his bond—a man who always paid off.

The records show that they aren't wrong. The topliners of boxing know this better than any others.

Take the case of Frank Moran, the former Pittsburgh heavy weight, for instance. Frank had his ups and downs in his time, and he never really got into the big money until he crossed the trail of Rickard.

Frank dragged down less than $10,000 for his second fight with Jim Coffey, the Irish favorite, in New York. Then he went to Paris to fight Jack Johnson, who was champion at the time. Johnson got his purse, but Frank never was paid off. The war came on and France declared a moratorium and tied up Frank's money. He has been whistling for his bit ever since, after having battled 20 hard rounds with Li'l Artha.

IN 1916, Rickard came back from the Argentine broke as a result of a revolution that wiped out his cattle holdings. He borrowed money to put on a fight between Moran and Jess Willard, who had taken the crown from Johnson the year before. He signed Moran for a flat price, but promised him half as much as he paid Willard, who had a guarantee with a privilege of a percentage of the gate receipts. The bout jammed Madison Square Garden in New York and made money. Willard's percentage exceeded his guarantee and when Moran received his check it was for many thousands more than he had signed. As a result Moran was sold on Tex's squareness forever.

Jack Dempsey had some bitter experiences with other promoters that made him appreciate Rickard. He fought Billy Miske in the Middle West and didn't fare so well financially, and he took on Tom Gibbons at Shelby, Mont., and didn't come anywhere near collecting his guarantee, although his manager, Jack Kearns, corraled all the money in sight, several banks crushing in the settlement. Boxing for Rickard was a different proposition. When Tex promised him a certain amount or a certain huge percentage, Jack knew the money would be waiting for him.

THE failures of other promoters who sought to emulate him made Rickard a bigger man by comparison. Tex could afford to sit back and let his competition hang itself and then see the champions come flocking back to his banner.

Rickard was not the only man of his time who possessed great vision and leadership in the boxing game. The much maligned Jack Kearns had more to do with the making of Dempsey and million-dollar gates than Rickard himself. He, too, was a master at the of ballyhoo and taught Rickard a few tricks to this line. It was he who conceived the idea of having Rickard put up a half-million dollar purse for the Battle of the Century between Dempsey and Georges Carpentier, in 1921. He made Rickard see that by making the bout the biggest thing in history he could make the world buzz with excitement and flock to see the thing.

RICKARD had the courage to go through with it, even when his partners, Billy Brady and C. B. Cochran, pulled out, and he was rewarded beyond his fondest expectations. The bout drew more than $1,600,000 and Tex pocketed a huge profit. Rickard and Kearns underestimated the drawing possibilities of the match. Kearns thought he was getting the world when he signed for $300,000, with $200,000 going to the challenger. As a matter of fact, he did himself and Dempsey out of an additional $300,000 or $400,000 by demanding a guarantee instead of taking a percentage.

Gene Tunney drew down just a little less than $1,000,000 for his 10-round return bout with Dempsey at Chicago six years later. He had Rickard and Kearns, the latter then out of the picture, to thank for his good fortune.

M'Millin Named As Possible Texas Coach

MANHATTAN, Kan., Jan. 12.—(AP.)—That A. N. (Bo) McMillin, head coach of the Kansas State Agricultural College, is being considered for the post of head coach at Texas Christian University was learned last night when McMillin said he would go to Fort Worth to confer with officials of the Texas college when he recovers from an attack of influenza which has kept him in the hospital for a week.

The vacancy at Texas Christian was caused by resignation of Madison Bell, who resigned to accept the coachship at Texas A. and M.

My Pal, TEX RICKARD

the property was sold and the conductor had a nice profit. Tex was reimbursed. He always used to laugh about that incident, as I had kidded him on the train.

Again he told me that in every big show he ever staged he could point to incidents in his early life that caused him to make the big decisions.

"I learned to look people square in the eye when I was dealing faro," he used to tell me. "My games always were on the level and men used to like to have you look them in the eye."

"But even before that I learned to take chances," he said. "Back in the cow punching days, and later in the Yukon, where you had to take chances to stay alive, I was used to it. But the fiercest competition," he told me, with a smile, "was promoting the first shows in New York. Those fellows in high collars, hard hats and city slicker ways used to get my goat for a long time. I used to think they were tougher than the gun-toting boys I had lived with. But after a few years I got to like them best of all. I found they were only 'drug store cowboys' with sound hearts."

Although Tex always drove a hard bargain, he was one of the softest-hearted men I ever knew in his personal affairs. He was one of the easiest men in the world to get money from. I can recall scores of other cases where down-and-outers who had a reputation for being on the level could get any sum from Tex. That was all he cared to know. Being "on the level" was Tex's only credit requirement. He loaned thousands of dollars that never were returned.

At the funeral services in the Garden Wednesday, when my eyes wandered over the thousands of solemn faces in the galleries, I thought then that many a one of them was mourning the loss of a real friend with a heart of gold.

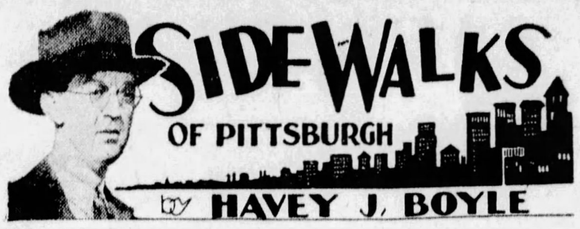
METROPOLITAN DISTRICT NEWS



IT DEVELOPS that the story about the old lady who sighed for her piano as she was walking into the theater and upon being asked why she wanted her piano in the theater lobby said because she had left her theater tickets on the piano, is a very old story so it won't be repeated here.

Bill Barnett, a brother of the famous Luke, the male impersonator, also goes in for representing himself as a foreigner always getting into a jam. Recently Bill Barnett walked into the Homestead Police Station and complained that his automobile had been stolen. Burgess Jack Cavanaugh, who knows both Barnetts and their jokes, just laughed.

"Say, that's a good idea," said Burgess Cavanaugh. "Pull it on the next cop who comes in—he'll fall for your joke." "But I'm not joking," said Barnett, "this is on the level." But it took him about an hour of earnest talking before any of the Homestead boys took his story seriously.

A CORRESPONDENT in good humor mildly disagrees with the glowing account of Operative 469, regarding the local hoosegow. He said he has heard different. In fact, a guest, who was a mere transient in that he was only "in" for 30 days, he complained about the service, especially the tonsorial department. This might be corrected if only a first-class barber would be considerate enough to do something that will land him in jail for a reasonable term.

In one railroad Pullman car the other day the column noted three Pittsburgh millionaires. They were not traveling together, but they conversed with one another from time to time. I could not help hearing one millionaire say his wife complained about the dirt from the furnaces making the curtains black, that he was absolutely lost when his wife goes away and leaves him behind, and that he liked apple pie. I was hopeful that like those boys in Horatio Alger I might hear one whisper to the other: "Buy B. V. Q. at 20 and hold on until it reaches 1,000," but the best I got was a tip on apple pie. And, of course, one can't invest in apple pie. Furthermore, if it were possible and the column bought some everyone immediately would begin eating blackberry pie.

BRENTWOOD ACTS AGAINST SMOKE

BELLEVUE'S BUS ROUTE RAPPED

A protest against the bus route soon to be put into effect in Bellevue may be made by the Bellevue Board of Trade, in behalf of residents south of Lincoln avenue.

The route announced by the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company is entirely north of Lincoln avenue, the main thoroughfare. Citizens living south of that artery would have to walk a considerable distance to take the busses, they say, making the service of little value to them.

The Board of Trade is scheduled to take up the question at its meeting Tuesday night. Officials of the coach company said the route proposed could not be changed without consent of the State Public Service Commission.

92-Year-Old Bonds Paid

FADED OLD BONDS REDEEMED BY CITY CONTROLLER

This faded old bond for three dollars, one of three presented to the city controller's office for payment, is 92 years old and from age slightly illegible, but ancient records show it legitimately issued on May 16, 1837, and maturing July 1, 1839. W. C. Cope, traveling salesman, Wellsville, O., presented the bonds and waived one per cent yearly interest. He found them in an old trunk of his grandfathers. At the top, the city's new controller, Henry Oliver Evans, cancels the bonds before paying them.

ORDINANCE GIVEN TO COUNCIL

Bids for the erection of a bathhouse to be built at Brentwood Borough's swimming pool were ordered advertised and to be awarded February 7 at a meeting held by Council. This item and additional grading of the ball park will cost $25,000, which was approved by the voters in a bond issue at last June's election.

A smoke nuisance ordinance also was passed at the first and second readings, and will be up for final passage at the next month's meeting.

Burgess Bernhard Kestner, submitted his annual building report for last year, which shows a decrease in building by $300,000 as to the previous year. In 1928 there were 127 building permits issued at a cost of $700,000, while in 1927 the costs reached the million mark.

Three miles of new streets was paved last year according to a report by Robert A. Snyder, borough engineer. He also made known that more than one-third of the seven-mile sewer contract in the district No. 5 has been completed.

A committee of five borough officials was appointed to represent the borough at the convention of the State Association of Boroughs to be held in Harrisburg, February 19, 20 and 21. The delegates are: Burgess Kestner, Mr. Snyder, C. H. Bracken, solicitor; A. G. Kaufmann, president of council, and Councilman Frank Letzkus.

Burgess Kestner notified Council that Motorcycle Patrolman Frank Knefelkamp is suffering a fracture of his left leg, caused when his motorcycle was struck by an automobile on January 8. President Kaufmann presided.

FARE IS INJURED AS SOUTH SIDE TAXI SKIDS

Will Rogers Says

NEW YORK, Jan. 11.

I see by tonight's papers that a Pennsylvania jury sentenced that fourteen-year-old boy to life imprisonment because he believed in witchcraft. For that's all he had ever been raised up to. Be like sentencing one of our children for acting according to their religious beliefs. No doubt about there being witchcraft in that county. The jury's verdict shows that plainer than the boy's deed.

What's become of an old-fashioned law they called "change of venue?" I think it's still in vogue, among the rich at any rate.

The Lord certainly had that dozen in mind when he said, "Father, forgive them; they know not what they do."

Andy, your state's gone haywire.

Yours, WILL.

"Big Ten" Are Still Bullish; How Hertz Became Wealthy

—By B. C. FORBES—

ALTHOUGH not yet 50, John Hertz, originator of the Yellow taxi and later interested in other enterprises, has sold out and announced he has retired. He said to me several years ago:

"I would like to quit but I have got hold of a cow by the tail and can't let go. Once you get into the business and financial game, it is hard to get everything lined up so you can withdraw without disappointing your friends."

This ex-newsboy has already done the work of two ordinary lifetimes. He first made his mark as an automobile salesman. He did it by being ready and willing to hop out of bed at any hour of the night and go to the assistance of any customer whose car had stuck—in those days horseless carriages had a chronic habit of stopping and refusing to go. He soon earned the reputation of giving the best service in Chicago. So buyers trooped to him.

Long ago he became a millionaire. Now he proposes to "enjoy life." It remains to be seen whether or not he will be able to readjust his life to an abundance of leisure. Some men can't. Some men can't.

ONE of the so-called "Big Ten" operators in the stock market, Joe Toplitzky, Californian real estate magnate, has arrived in New York. He and W. C. Durant are particularly close friends.

Joe is as bullish as ever on the right kind of stocks—and, needless to say, on Los Angeles, his home town. He says that a great many wealthy Californians are now dividing their investments between real estate and stocks, preferring not to have all their eggs in one basket. Business on California stock exchanges has multiplied manyfold.

General Petroleum has started a $25,000,000 refinery at Torrance, in the Los Angeles territory, which will employ some 2,500 workers. Real estate financing in Los Angeles last year exceeded $550,000,000. The city's population has increased 125 per cent in eight years. Many families are now getting rich through the discovery of oil under lots and chicken runs they own in suburban subdivisions. This swelling stream of liquid gold naturally makes Southern California enviably prosperous.

ALKOTZMAN, general manager of the May Oil Burner Corporation, Baltimore, after referring to this column's advocacy of paid vacations for workers, writes:

"Beginning with Christmas, 1928, we adopted a policy of paying our entire factory organization for Christmas day and New Year's Day. It is the usual practice in organizations where hourly paid workers are employed that they lose these two days. Our corporation also distributed to its entire organization a very liberal cash bonus as the result of its satisfactory operations for the year. We would like to see other manufacturing organizations throughout the country adopt similar practices towards their factory employes."

The writer told a large business gathering in San Antonio several years ago that the city badly needed bigger and fewer banks. News comes that two of the oldest banks in the largest city in Texas, the Lockwood National and the Frost National, have consolidated with resources totaling more than $22,000,000. Also, that the Alamo National Bank is increasing its capital stock by $1,000,000.

There are other cities which should follow this example. Growing business calls for growing banks.

I LEARN that serious trouble which was brewing among California oil companies, and which threatened disastrous losses, has been composed and that oil leaders there now view the situation optimistically.

Standard Oil of New York is often called the most pugnacious of America's large oil organizations. This was the company which had such a bitter fight with Walter Teagle's Standard Oil of New Jersey and with Deterding, the Dutch oil giant.

The oil industry today needs co-operation more than cut-throat competition. So long, however, as there is great potential overproduction there is potential danger. At that, good oil shares look cheaper than most varieties.

A WORKMAN writes:

"I thoroughly agree with a statement in your column that an employe entitled to a larger salary should be raised without having to ask for it. All agree that an ideal employe does his duty without an employer reminding him of it. Why should not a good employer be equally as ready to do his duty?"

THE bulls still express confidence in their ability to send their pet stocks higher.

W. C. DURANT was probably the most surprised man in America when his Durant Motors stock fell immediately after his announcement that he was turning over the management to others.

I happen to know that he advised his own closest personal friends within the last week that developments were coming which would make the shares distinctly more valuable. His latest statement that he has not sold any of his own stock unquestionably is true.

His other statement that he intends to reimburse every subscriber for Durant Motors, Star, Flint and other Durant flotations is exactly in line with what he told me two years ago. But how he can possibly do this is unfathomable. He has the money and I, for one, believe he has the intention. But damage once done, like sin he once told, is hard to obliterate.

MARKET BULLS TAKE WHIRL AT UTILITIES

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—(AP)—Price movements lacked uniformity at the opening of today's stock market, which was featured by a revival of bullish activity in the public utility shares. Pullman opened 3¼ points higher, American Water Works 2¾, and Columbia Gas, Studebaker, International Combustion and Archer Daniels Midland showed initial gains of a point or so. American Steel Foundries and Borg, Inc., advanced to new high ground. Montgomery Ward, Packard Motors, Johns Manville and Goodyear Rubber fell back a point or more.

The advance from 6 to 7 per cent in the call money rate yesterday had a restrictive effect on trading. Unless there is a change in the character of the trading before Tuesday an increase in brokers' loans is looked for next week. Recent strength of some of the seasoned dividend paying industrials is attributed, in part, to buying by investment trusts.

Pullman ran up nearly 5 points, with some of the buying reported to have been influenced by the mistaken belief that the dividend rate on the new stock had been increased to $6 annually. Union Bag and Paper, which was under brisk accumulation yesterday, ran up 3 points and Stewart-Warner climbed 2 to a new high at 141½.

There were several soft spots. General American Tank dropped 3½ points on the first sale to 98 and Curtiss, National Bellas Hess and U. S. Smelting each yielded 2 points. U. S. Steel common was in fairly good demand around yesterday's high.

KOPPERS DENIES USE OF ONLY W. VA. COAL

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

REPORTS that the Koppers Company is planning to use only West Virginia coal in its by-product coke and gas plant throughout the country were emphatically denied yesterday by W. F. Rust, vice president of the company.

"While we are using a large amount of West Virginia and Kentucky coal we are also using Pittsburgh district coal and intend to continue using it wherever it proves most economical," said Mr. Rust.

"At the present time the Koppers Company is experimenting with coal prepared by the new Rheolaveur process now being used by the Pittsburgh Coal Company. Constant attention is being given the possibilities of finding means for using Pittsburgh district coal to greater advantage in the preparation of coke and its by-products," he concluded.

THE statement was prompted by reports from West Virginia that production in the southern fields would be increased from 1,500,000 to 2,500,000 tons a year by the company confining itself to the use of West Virginia and Kentucky coal.

The Pittsburgh Coal Company has returned its output to a normal basis. The production of 11,395,083 tons from mines in all districts in 1928 was greater than in any year since 1923, which was the best since the war. The coal mined last year compared with 9,128,932 tons in 1927, 5,012,501 tons in 1926 and 4,291,579 tons in 1924, when the costly fight with the union started.

Activity in the stock has caused a flood of rumors during the past few months. The stock closed yesterday at 77¾. This was a price difficult to explain in view of the company's present condition. The annual report for 1928 is expected to show a loss. In the three preceding years the company went into the red $5,292,212. Most of this was attributable to labor troubles but the present difficulty is found in poor prices.

REPORTS that a portion of the undeveloped coal reserves are about to be sold are without confirmation from any official source. Among those mentioned as prospective buyers have been the United States Steel Corporation, the Koppers Company, the Taplin Interests and the Van Sweringens.

Some of these do not appear to be logical buyers. The steel corporation probably would be interested only in coal located near to the rivers. Pittsburgh Coal has some suitable properties but these are not extensive enough to explain the activity in the stock. Of course the deposits might be purchased as a result of a far look into the future when more suitable lands may be exhausted. At present the corporation is going six miles inland to get its river coal.

THE Koppers Company definitely decided that it did not want the properties several years ago. The Taplin interests are large owners of coal properties but it is difficult to see why they should want to go more deeply into an industry with such poor prospects unless an exceptional bargain is offered.

The Van Sweringens appear to be more probable customers than the others. They could probably make a paying proposition of coal lands more easily than the others by influencing their extensive railroad systems to buy most of the output. In addition to this two small railroad properties would be thrown into the deal. These would be the Montour and the Pittsburgh, Lisbon and Western. The Montour is the originator of a large amount of freight traffic.

The possibility that the Montour Railroad might be sold to one of the large railroad systems has also been mentioned and denied by the Pittsburgh Coal Company. Both the Baltimore and Ohio and the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie are supposed to have been interested in this line.

ASIDE from some development such as the sale of part of the physical properties, Pittsburgh Coal does not offer hopes for immediate wealth to stockholders. Steady progress has been made in improving the properties. Some day the tremendous holdings of undeveloped land will be valuable.

The 170,153 acres of unmined coal owned at the end of 1927 were valued at $109,142,113 or $642 an acre on the balance sheet. The funded debt was only $10,569,500.

BUGS BAER Says

Arthur "Bugs" Baer

WE helped ourselves to a slice of the mild influenza carnival last week and offer the statistics to the Rockefeller Foundation free of charge.

When they say a flu germ is mild they mean it is mild when compared with the microbe that causes a broker to bite a ticker or the bacillus that throws a tornado into high gear when passing through Kansas.

The present wave of gentle flu that is being merchandised through the country is almost effeminate when placed alongside the records of the Canadian Northwest Mounted.

But it gets its man and relinquishes him again with all the reluctance of a Chinese bandit.

Our non-stop flight covered seven days. During that time we were refueled by an auxiliary doctor on the mezzanine floor.

He dropped 2,340 gallons of high voltage quinine pills aboard the Question Mark. It was a daring feat.

Trying to swallow a five-grain quinine pill is just as ambitious performance as an impatient cuckoo dashing out of its Swiss chalet and attacking Father Time.

In the first place, when they get up to five grains, they are no longer pills. They are sun-kissed door knobs.

Trying to swallow a big five-gram pill is like pushing an opera hat down a mail chute. After you do get it down you expect to see 11 flu germs come up attired in Yale football jerseys.

The effects of this mild flu on the system are neat but not gaudy. First of all, your body feels like a bamboo stalk, full of joints that will not bend.

Your tongue looks like the last bath towel you stole from the hotel.

Your eyes are as loose as a couple of badly pitched quoits on the lawn of the veteran's home.

You get so thin that your ears resemble crown fenders.

A meal is an oyster cracker served in seven courses.

The parade passes its given point in about seven days and then you start to get better. Keep your feet warm, avoid detours and do not remove your overcoat unless you expect to steal a better one in return.

Wanted—Public to Help Make Great City Charter

The people of Metropolitan Pittsburgh, and this includes the entire county, can have the charter of the consolidated city just as they want it, within the limits of the provision of the amendment to the state constitution. At a dinner in observance of the success of the Metropolitan Plan amendment in the recent election this fact was made clear. Co-operation of the people is sought in the framing of the charter, which, when approved, will show Pittsburgh to be the fourth city in population in the United States.

Morris Knowles, vice chairman of the Metropolitan Plan Commission, announced that the commission is anxious to know the mind of the people as a whole on the matter. Suggestions are asked on all phases of governmental activities, including minor courts, public safety, public works, welfare, health, building, utilities, recreation, city planning, housing, waste disposal, taxation, etc. The views of the people throughout the county will be valuable aid in drawing up the charter, and it is hoped they will be offered freely.

It also was announced at the dinner that the charter would contain no "ripper" provision and that those in office at the time of adoption of the instrument by the people, which is a mandate of the amendment, will continue to officiate until the expiration of their terms. That is a fair and just stand.

This is the most important matter before the people at the present time. A charter is a local constitution, giving to a corporate body its only legal authority to impose certain regulations upon society. What it can do in that respect must be stipulated either specifically or in a general way. Things we may want to do in the future may have to be left undone unless we make provision now to do them. Things we would remedy may be found impossible of correction unless we provide a way now.

What is your idea about police control? Would you have the safety arm continue to be the plaything of politicians? Would you have it so the public could immediately intervene in case of scandalous disclosures? Whatever your idea may be, speak up now. Whatever it may be on the subject of police or any other matter, especially if you think it is an improvement on present methods, let the charter committee know about it.

Helping to frame such a charter as is contemplated may be the biggest thing in your life. Don't fail to have your say, if you think it worth the saying.

Winter Is Planning Time; Summer Time for Work

Council, it is announced, will prepare ordinances for the raising of North Side flood streets at once, if the Department of Public Works is ready to go ahead with the improvements, estimated to cost $600,000. The intent is to have things in such shape that contracts will have been awarded and everything in readiness to begin work with the coming of suitable weather in the spring.

The plan is correct. It should be applied to all public work. Planning for such improvements and taking care of preliminary details is a duty of winter. Summer is the time of execution and if preparatory work is delayed until that time loss of valuable working days is certain to follow. We found that the case last summer, when a number of street improvements were not ready to seek bids until a date so late that completion of the work at an unseasonable time was forecast.

Council appears to have the efficiency idea well ingrained. If it can get co-operation from the executive department the city will be benefited.

Two Americans—
And Their Millions

Many men, many minds, and only the Angel Gabriel has a right to criticize them.

John D. Rockefeller went to Europe, saw the magnificent Palace of Versailles falling into decay, and the beautiful Palace of Fontainebleau in need of repair. The French, after the war, were hard pressed for money.

He spent forty million francs on Versailles, and other millions at Fontainebleau. The French will not forget it.

Frank Gould, who inherited millions, went to Europe and invested $5,000,000 in a white marble gambling casino at Nice. Dispatches say he has difficulty in obtaining from the French government a license to open it. There is a very successful gambling casino just east of Nice, at Monte Carlo.

One American, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., spends millions to preserve for France, and all visitors to France, art treasures of inestimable value.

Another American spends his $5,000,000 on a white marble casino to promote gambling.

The French know the difference.

It Would Be So Simple
Just to Mind Our Own Business.

Senator Borah says that the Kellogg Peace Pact does not violate the Monroe Doctrine. It won't violate that doctrine unless the people have changed since the doctrine was formulated.

Eagerness for a Peace Pact, shows that certain Americans believe this country unable to manage itself.

Strange that a nation of 120,000,000 cannot do what the same nation did when it numbered only 4,000,000.

Is it really impossible for the United States to mind its own business, prepare and maintain its own defense, and let other nations do the same?

We have gone along fairly well on that basis hitherto.

Tales That Are Told

Too Big a Risk

IT was a very cold day, and the shoeblack was looking for a customer in order to warm himself up.

He suddenly caught sight of a tall youth whose shoes were not over clean. The man did not appear to be very pleased with himself and the shoeblack decided his footwear was probably the reason.

"Clean your shoes, sir?" he asked.

"No," snapped the other.

"Come on, sir. Give me a start for today. Clean 'em so's you can see your face in 'em, sir."

"No," scowled the other, leaning forward and banging his stick on the pavement. "No, I don't want to see my face."

"Coward!" retorted the shoeblack.

His Choice

GOSSIP had it that Gagge was crazy on amateur theatricals, and Gagge tried hard to contradict the rumor.

"But," said a friend in the club one day, "you are always in these amateur plays. You've played all sorts of parts during the last six months. If you don't like it, what do you do it all for?"

Another man spoke.

"Yes," he agreed, "how is it you never seem to tire of appearing in every private theatrical performance."

"But I do get tired of it," protested Gagge. "As a matter of fact, I'm sick of the whole thing, but if I'm not on the stage, I'll have to sit in the audience."

Asked and Answered

THE burglar's wife was in the witness-box, and the prosecuting counsel was conducting a vigorous cross-examination.

"Madam, you are the wife of this man?"

"Yes."

"You knew he was a burglar when you married him?"

"Yes."

"May I ask how you came to marry such an individual?"

"You may," returned the witness sarcastically, "I was getting old and had to choose between a burglar and a lawyer."

The cross-examination ended at this point.

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS

AT the bridge club, the hostess woman was bragging about what a select gang she always got to her bridge parties.

"Such a lovely group of dames I got in this here club," she says.

"Im strong for keeping the social tone up. I don't believe in playing bridge with my inferiors, do you, Mrs. Jones?"

"No," says Mrs. Jones, "but I wouldn't think you'd have so very much trouble about that. You don't ever run across any inferiors, do you, Mrs. Brown?"

LISTEN, WORLD!
By Elsie Robinson

SOMEONE said that an average couple with a child could live on $120 per month. So we called for answers and printed the budgets. Whereupon one spunky American wife hurled this protest. It is, in its way, as stirring as the Battle Hymn of the Republic. Perhaps it IS the battle hymn which inspired this particular republic!

DEAR MISS ROBINSON:

I have been reading those $120 budget letters with amazement. In each case the writer boasts with pride of living within the bounds of $120 a month or less. Frankly, do you think such an achievement justifies pride?

I DON'T!

We'll admit that it is all right for a young couple to start on $120 per month. It's permissible for such youngsters to be proud of their courage and thrift. We all admire their spunk and we take it for granted that the young husband will speedily make more and slowly but surely forge ahead.

BUT WHEN MOTHERS AND FATHERS WHO HAVE BEEN MARRIED FOR TEN YEARS BOAST OF "GETTING ALONG COMFORTABLY ON $120," I FOR ONE, SAY THEY OUGHT TO BE ASHAMED OF THEMSELVES. HOW DARE THEY BE SELF-SATISFIED WITH SUCH A MISERABLE RECORD IN THE FACE OF THEIR CHILDREN'S NEEDS?

Growing children need plenty of good milk, fresh vegetables and fruit. A working man needs nourishing meat and eggs. They should carry fairly heavy insurance and have some amusement. They should be dressed well enough to keep their self-respect and should also make provision for dental and medical attention. These are the fundamental needs of any decent American family. Yet I note a letter from a woman who claims to have "managed comfortably for herself, her husband and three lively boys" for five years on $150 per month—out of which they saved a first payment for a home and also banked $25 a month.

I say it can't be done except at the expense of their children's health. And it shouldn't be done. There's something the matter with a person who will go on year after year taking pride in a record like that. They should turn that pride into rebellion against such conditions and really get somewhere.

IT'S NO CREDIT TO ANY WOMAN TO ACCEPT SUCH A LIVING FOR HERSELF AND HER CHILDREN. A GOOD WIFE WILL HAVE SO MUCH AMBITION AND SPUNK THAT SHE WILL KEEP HER HUSBAND ON THE MOVE. THAT'S WHAT A WIFE IS FOR.

THERE'S A POINT AT WHICH THRIFT CEASES TO BE A VIRTUE AND BECOMES CONTEMPTIBLE AND UNAMERICAN.

AN AMERICAN WIFE.

That's a great letter, and it should blast a lot of false complacency.

It's no longer a question of HOW MUCH CAN YOU LIVE ON, but of HOW MUCH SHOULD YOU BE WILLING TO LIVE ON.

At what point in your working career should YOU be content to sit back and say, "I'm doing as well as can be expected of me."

JUST WHAT SHOULD BE THE PERFORMANCE OF AN AVERAGE, INTELLIGENT WAGE EARNER?

(Copyright, 1929, King Features Syn., Inc.)

NEW TIME
By Garrett P. Serviss

WE must give up the petty standards of chronology that formerly served to govern our ideas of time. The progress of science in every direction is proving the necessity of vastly enlarging our minds along this dimension. To an intelligence trained in scientific thinking, a century is but a time atom, or a time electron, and a millenium hardly a molecule. "Recorded History"—that imposing bugaboo before which our fathers bowed down in worshipful awe—has become a temporal trifle, a thing which began yesterday. The records of the great nations and empires have been swept into the accelerative world of the cinema, and Babylon, Persia, Egypt, Greece, Rome pass hurdling across our new mental screen with a hopping velocity which exhilerates the spectator almost to laughter as he glimpses Cyrus, Alexander and Caesar, skipping along on one another's heels.

* * *

A zip has also been imparted to suns and worlds, and the astronomer with his new measures of duration, traverses billions of years of solar and planetary evolution in an hour spinning atoms into orbs of visible nothingness, whirling soap-bubble suns into massive globes that glare with temperatures rising within to millions of degrees, and bringing them down through a countless procession of ages to a stolid density whose remorseless grip strings out even the enfeebled light waves as they struggle to escape.

Thus, as science ascribes greater and greater duration to the operations of nature, the imagination, to take them all in, must speed on the film, while the fascinated crowds that follow the march have to drop such trifles as years and centuries and learn to think with a cosmic grasp which lays hold of Old Time himself and dares to set his wings spinning like an aero propeller, and his scythe vibrating like the knifebar of a mowing machine.

* * *

We see this in the recent prolongation given to the estimated duration of geologic time, where thousands of millions of years are now calmly and confidently ascribed to periods that were formerly reckoned in tens of millions at the most. We see it even more strikingly in the new estimates of the length of time that has elapsed since mankind began to assume its characteristic physical shapes and to catch the hang of its mysteriously efficient and persistently developing brain—that gift of the gods which was destined to transform a tree-climber into a star-gazer, a brute beast competing in ugliness with gorillas into a fair-browed thinker, worthy to walk and to talk with his maker in the garden.

Bible Passages

"Thy Keeper"
(Psalm 121.)

I WILL lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help.

My help cometh from the Lord, which made heaven and earth.

He will not suffer thy foot to be moved: he that keepeth thee will not slumber.

Behold, he that keepeth Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep.

The sun shall not smite thee by day, nor the moon by night.

The Lord shall preserve thee from all evil: he shall preserve thy soul.

The Lord shall preserve thy going out and thy coming in from this time forth, and even for evermore.

Love's Way

QUESTION:
How can one hold love?
Dear, I know
That, like all lovely things,
Love has its tides that ebb and flow,
Its autumns and its springs.

I know your shining locks will change
Sometime from gold to gray,
But must your heart grow cold and strange,
Forgetful of today?

I would have love stay still the same
While stealthy years creep by;
No fitful wave, no mounting flame,
That needs must ebb or die.

Answer:
Love is not held by any tie,
By any bolt or bar;
Who fetters love must see it die
Of longing for a star!

But if, like yours, a heart would know
How constant love can be,
Then he must loose it, let it go
Untrammeled, joyous, free!

Isn't It So?

Virtue is its own reward. It seldom gets an encore.

The Log of '28
By Herbert Kaufman

WHAT a year of history, hysteria and holocaust!

Prosperity goes drunk with optimism and stages a bull market which still thumbs its nose at charts, graphs, logic and the Federal Reserve frowns.

Television gives Impossibility another swift kick in the pants and erects an optical bridge across the Atlantic, while George Eastman erases one more "can't-be-done" by achieving the miracle of motion photography in natural colors.

Al Smith forgets crowd psychology and the telling effect of a silk hat and frock coat on the voting trade, stoops to conquer, cocks a brown derby on his head, and is knocked into it.

An orphan from Iowa discloses the callouses of early poverty, displays a full line of experience samples, takes Constitutionalism, efficiency and high tariff for his battle-cries, and finishes a life-long ladder climb at the White House door.

Ten thousand murderers and highwaymen evade justice, but Michigan balances the score with a life sentence on a woman bootlegger.

Science questions the workings of God, and California produces a pair of boy fiends, whose crimes suggest that science might better devote its inquiries to the mysterious workings of human nature.

South America celebrates Hoover's visit with a characteristic shindig, invites the attention of the League of Nations, and imperils the integrity of the Monroe Doctrine.

A Hearst correspondent discloses side dickers between Britain and France, which prove that international covenants and armament agreements are making empty noises at one corner while diplomacy continues to operate the old thimble-rigging game on another.

Payne Whitney's will leaves his granddaughter a potential billionaire and Thomas Fortune Ryan's leaves his son a pair of shirt studs.

Mr. Tunney reconvinces Mr. Dempsey that he's the better man, abdicates his throne and marries a steel king's heiress. News wires are less excited when Swedish royalty and American asbestos are later united in matrimony.

Civil war continues to play bull in China's shop, and the Ameer of Afghanistan starts a revolution in dress, shaving habits—and his realm.

Bancitaly stock gets a financial soak in the jaw and comes back with a wallop and record-breaking dividend.

The National City, the Chase National, the Guaranty Trust and the Continental Commercial organize the first Billionaires' Club.

Messrs. Sinclair, Fall and Stewart beat their cases, but if editorial opinion reflects national attitude, lose their faces.

King George explores the Valley of Death, and the Prince of Wales, exploring the tropics, smashes precedent to smithereens by a land and sea hop, from mid-Africa to mid-London, in eleven days.

The silent drama finds a celluloid voice, and the Rothstein case suggests that sin's wages are millions as well as death.

A strange score, my gentles—amazingly proud, revoltingly sordid and punctuated with shipwreck, world-wide earthquakes and appalling hurricanes.

Nature delights to lay us over her knee in hours of high triumph and deliver such spankings to remind humanity she still has something to say in the management of mundane affairs. They assure the future that plenty of problems remain to taunt mortal resource and whiten its hair—including influenza.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY
By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—It is estimated an average of 3,000 persons meet every large incoming trans-Atlantic liner in New York. There is about it all the expectant air of the race track. Several hours before a boat arrives West street is in a turmoil. West street is the borderline of high adventure.

Automobiles and taxicabs are parked for blocks and cordons of police keep the traffic lanes clear. The pier sheds are fenced off with privileged space for those with custom passes. Regulations are rigid. Huge "No Smoking" signs are on every hand.

The arriving ship towed by the gallant little tugs, like so many tumble bugs, comes slowly and majestically up the North River—resembling the Flatiron Building suddenly loosed to drift up Broadway. There is much screeching, tooting and the whirr of winches. Sometimes a band.

The upper decks are alive with eager faces pressed to the rails and fluttering hands. Ship officers are megaphoning precise orders in relays. Save in a severe storm, no moment is so perilous as when docking. The slightest mistake in the narrow space spells disaster.

At the portholes in the steerage are eager-eyed alien faces getting their first glimpse of the strange land they have heard so much about. Crowds at the pier rails scream their greetings which no one hears and which are returned in the same fashion. A bedlam and faintings are frequent.

After the ship is warped to the dock with giant ropes the gang plank is projected out to the ship—the journey is ended. And there is a rush for initialed space on the pier to await baggage. Ship news reporters who have met the boat at Quarantine are first to hurry off to their typewriters.

There is a cosmopolitan flavor about the unloading of a ship—an opera singer bedecked with orchids, the actress with some new breed of dog, the tweedy and monocled voyageur who seems bored by the excitement, the long haired virtuoso who hugs his violin tightly, the rich with "yessing" valets and prim maids. And such.

Custom inspectors are polite but firm. They often have an uncanny sense in their rummagings. For some the inspection is casual—a mere formal peek into one piece, a custom stamping of all and passengers are on their way. But for others, there is the fine toothed comb raking of every article and now and then some harrassed and white faced arrival is led to private quarters for a more careful search. On almost every ship is some diplomat or dignitary who receives "freedom of the port" and goes through customs like a shot. There are abuses of custom by returning passengers, of course, but mostly slight. Uncle Sam is not so much concerned with the small fry. He is after bigger game—the international and professional smuggling boys.

One of New York's most successful insurance agents has an unusual method of keeping up contacts with those who are likely prospects. His secretary searches every sort of publication for any mention of prospects—a sort of one man clipping bureau. These are carefully filed away. After a year the prospect will receive a letter from the agent calling his attention to the clipping and wondering if it has been seen by him. Whether it was or not, the reaction to being remembered in this way is pleasant. And pays.

Ben Riley, the restaurateur, too, keeps a close eye on patrons. Each night he sets down the name and date of prominent people who have dined there. At intervals of several months he checks up and if they have not been back he sends a handwritten letter telling them how much they have been missed and wondering if the food and service were not up to usual standards. As a result his place is always well filled. Flattery is a big asset in a restaurant. Ben, as it might be guessed, is Irish.

And a famous head waiter tells me he is shortly to give up a highly profitable post. He is returning to England to live in a home acquired on the countryside. He has become glutted watching overfed people overeat and suffers from fantastic nauseas while moving about his dining room. For many months the spectacle of the Gargantuan gorging has so affected him that he can eat only toast and fruit.

ONCE OVERS
By J. J. Mundy

NEARLY every woman thinks her husband is one of the most difficult to manage.

She often thinks that certain other women have a much happier time with their husbands.

The woman who sets out to manage a husband has a big job to do.

The husband who adopts such tactics has more of an undertaking than he can carry out successfully.

Too many married people want to be managers.

While the other partner is just as much a part of the combination, it is true that too often one insists upon being dictator.

Usually this steers the matrimonial craft to dangerous seas.

There should not be a desire to be undisputed captain of affairs.

Matters of importance should be talked over dispassionately.

Neither should insist upon his or her ideas being carried out.

Compromise as a matter of settling disputes makes for smoother sailing, especially with those who are near and dear.

If the plan were generally adopted it would prevent many serious breaks among married couples.
